VERY LATE FROM UTAH.

Arrival of Mormons Before from Great Salt Lake City—Very Recent Mormon Sentiment on the Future—A Bountiful Harvest—The Mormon Temple, &c.

Yesterday, we had the pleasure of an interview with Elder SAMUEL W. RICHARDS, of Utah, who arrived in this City on Thursday evening, after the remarkably short trip of twenty-eight days from Great Salt Lake City. Our dates from Utah by this arrival reach to the 19th of August.

Elder RICHARDS left Salt Lake City in company with four others. He was accompanied to this City by only one of the party. Elder GEORGE G. STYLES, with whom he is commissioned to visit the Latter-Day Saints in the Atlantic States and in Great Britain. The two Elders purpose remaining in town for a week or ten days, and will then sail for England.

The harvest in Utah this season has been remarkably abundant. All the crops have yielded in larger measure than for some years previously. The Saints were joyful at the cheerful prospects before them. Peace and plenty were with them, and their causes of complaint, according to the sentiments of Mr. RICHARDS, must be exceedingly slight. Wheat, corn and potatoes, particularly, were full crops, and the harvesting had ended prosperously without adverse weather.

Business was reviving, as the result of a good crop, and mercantile pursuits have a thrifty air of enterprise.

No alarm existed in Salt Lake City in consequence of the march of the United States military forces towards Utah. Authentic or detailed particulars of the movements of the troops had not been received up to the period of the departure of this company; but rumors of the dispositions of the Government had come to the ears of the Mormons with a sufficient degree of distinctness to cause them to appreciate the extent of the recent demonstrations. They expressed themselves unable to understand the motives of the Government in dispatching a force against them; declared that they intended no harm to anybody; disclaimed any intention of entering into a conflict, armed or otherwise, and simply asked "to be let alone." It was not apprehended that the troops would find any wrongs to redress, nor was it the Mormon purpose to place obstacles in the way of the performance of their duty. In other words, the most pacific intentions and inclinations were expressed.

The only Federal officers remaining in Utah, were Drs. HURT and ARMSTRONG, Indian Agents. The course of Judge DRUMMOND since his return to the States appears to have moved the Saints to severe animadversions; they discuss the Judge's antecedents with merciless severity.

The reports of the spread of discontent and disaffection among the Mormons in Salt Lake city are denied with great emphasis. BRIGHAM YOUNG, it appears, has met the rumor by an offer to send all the malcontents out of the territory in good style, provided with first-rate teams and teamsters, and with equipments for the journey over the Plains, provided the Federal Government will send to Utah, in equally good style, all the parties who wish to go there. Brother BRIGHAM says he considers this "a fair offer."

Dr. BRIGHAM had returned in excellent health from his Northern trip. His visit was extended to the infant settlement of the Saints at Salmon River, where there are now some forty or fifty persons. This settlement was begun about a year ago. It is in a flourishing condition. The settlers went out from Salt Lake City. Brother BRIGHAM has been holding up their hands, and comforting them.

An immigration of four thousand persons was passed on the Plains by Elder RICHARDS' party. This includes the entire immigration of this season. These were eight or ten distinct trains, each under the guidance of its own Elder. All were in good health, first-rate spirits, and the parties looked forward to their arrival at Salt Lake with the pleasurable anticipations of people going home. Among them were English, Welsh, Danes, Swedes and other nationalities; the Welsh, especially, being strongly represented. The immigrants were passed between Independence Rock and Fort Laramie, and so far as could be judged, the "hand-cart" portion of the companies were having the best time—a fact which will gladden the heart of Brother BRIGHAM. Hand-cart travel over the Plains is one of his great hobbies.

Elder RICHARDS' party also passed a portion of the United States troops between Fort Laramie and Fort Kearney. Mr. RICHARDS came down the north side of the Platte. The troops passed up on the south side. The commanding officer was unknown, nor did Mr. RICHARDS ascertain the exact number of the troops, but he presumes they were the greater portion of the force intended for service in Utah.

A number of very heavy freight trains, with twenty-six to seventy-five wagons in each, were also passed on the way.

The little party who accompanied Mr. RICHARDS, although but five persons all told, experienced no difficulties with the Indians. They passed the Sioux Nation in camp, and encountered several scattered bands of savages, but observed no hostile demonstrations.

Mr. RICHARDS informs us that the work upon the new Mormon Temple in Salt Lake City is progressing favorably. The Saints have laid up the basement story of the edifice in excellent masonry. The work, however, has been delayed this season, by the scarcity of workmen, who were in great demand in the harvest field. It is declared by the Saints that this Temple will be a model of architectural beauty—quite surpassing in its beauties the first one in Nauvoo. Some years must still elapse before its completion, but the Saints are proud of it already.

Just previous to the departure of Elder RICHARDS, there were rumors of Indian disturbances in the immediate vicinity of Salt Lake City. A few days before, a company of emigrants, setting out for California, killed an Indian about forty miles from the City, and considerable trouble had been occasioned by that act. On the day Mr. RICHARDS left, it was reported that the Indians were gathering in force to revenge themselves upon the Saints, and an immediate attack was apprehended. The Salt Lake people, however, were fully prepared, and a conflict would be necessarily attended with some serious consequences.

The present Mormon population of Utah is estimated by Elder RICHARDS at 60,000. There have been some fluctuations in the population since the last census, but the arrivals have exceeded the departures. The total population of the Territory, Gentile and Mormon, is 80,000. At the next session of Congress a determined effort will be made by the Mormons for the admission of Utah as a State, and the necessary papers are already prepared.

President JOHN TAYLOR, of New-York, Elder ERASTUS SNOW and other prominent Mormons, arrived in Salt Lake City on the 8th August.

From the Mormon of yesterday.

At the moment of going to press we have received dates from Great Salt Lake City, up to the 9th of August. We are glad to be able to report that the Saints are rejoicing in the work of the Great God, trusting in Him for the present and future and neither scared nor giving up the ghost at the rumor of Uncle Sam's troops being on the plains.

We are happy to inform our readers that Presidents TAYLOR, Snow, and others arrived in the City of the Saints on the 7th of August, well, and rejoicing in the privilege of singing again with their brethren in the peaceful valleys of Utah.

The earth has yielded an abundant harvest, and plenty crowns the board of the faithful laborer. The children of Zion never felt better in this last dispensation. The prophet of the Most High is well and enjoys the unlimited confidence of the people. We expect to see Elder SAMUEL RICHARDS, from the eastern states, walk into our sanctum at an early day. He has come along with the Mormon express. We shall be happy to see him.

By letter from Elder MUSSER, at Laramie, we learn that the emigration goes on well, and with the exception of a stampede, nothing particular to report. We shall publish his letter next week.

Elders SAMUEL W. RICHARDS and GEORGE SNYDER arrived here this (Thursday) evening, twenty-eight days from Utah, by way of Council Bluffs, Chicago, and St. Louis. They are on a mission to the Churches in the States and in Europe. Their company consisted of five persons over the plains. They are in good health and spirits.

THE FIRST DAY OF THE CONVENTION.

[FROM THE SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

SYRACUSE, Thursday, Sept. 10.

There was some considerable talk this morning that the Delegates from New-York would be able to settle their difficulties before the hour for assembling of the Convention, so that they would appear as a unit in the deliberations of that body.

Some effort was indeed made toward producing that result, but I hardly think any of the parties were very much in earnest. The combatants were rather desirous of the notoriety which an appeal to the Convention would give them. A decision by the body, it was thought, would be an indorsement which the National Convention could not fail to recognize. The prize was worth a fight, and hence the lukewarm and only seeming efforts made to avoid that catastrophe.

It is understood that Mr. SICKLES, some time ago, in the office of the Collector of the Port, declared hostility to that official, giving him full and fair notice that he was henceforth his open and determined opponent. A representative position on the floor of the Convention and the consequent State ascendency which that position would give him, was the means by which he determined to give vitality and effect to his campaign against the Collector. Hence, until he was assured that the Convention would decide against him, it was manifestly his policy to keep clear of any compromises which would deprive him of the prestige.

Mayor WOOD had motives quite as strong deterring him from occupying a divided throne.

These two represented about all there was of the contest—the Savage and People's delegations not being thought seriously of.

As I intimated to you, yesterday, the Softs made a decided ascendancy in the Convention. The organization of convention has justified that estimation. It was a perfect coup d'état, on the part of the Softs, under the lead of PETER CAGGER.

It was a novel and somewhat hazardous experiment to go at even to a permanent organization. But the experiment was successful, and relieved the managers from the embarrassing position in which they were placed by the aspirations of DE WOLFE, LUDLOW, and others.

The morning session was very quiet and harmonious. The Chairman was cheered, the prominent members were cheered, and the Democratic sentiments in which they occasionally indulged, met with warm and enthusiastic responses.

The omission of the Chairman to announce the Committees on the New-York contestants, before the adjournment of the Convention, was the only feature that seemed to disturb the apparently universal good feeling and harmony.

After the adjournment, Mayor WOOD came up to the platform and obtained an introduction to the Chairman. He was proceeding to state his views of the proper course to be pursued by the Convention in arranging the difficulties in which the County of New-York was involved. The Chairman listened quite attentively for some time, and then sought to extract his button from the grasp of the Mayor, by the assurance that he knew nothing of the points in dispute—had no feeling in the matter—did not know who he should appoint on the Committee, and was entirely ignorant of the views entertained by any one member of the Convention. His Honor, finding that he was not to be permitted to argue the question further, concluded his importunities with the remark, that if the Chairman would retire to the privacy of his own room, and there take up the list of Delegates to the Convention, and appoint the Committee without reference to the views of others, and without consultation with any person, he and his associates would be content; but if the Chairman designed to consult others in the formation of the Committee, he claimed the right to be heard.

Capt. RYNDERS came up in time to hear the concluding sentence of his Honor's remarks. Introducing himself, and looking FERNANDO in the eye, he said: "Mr. Chairman, I would not so much mistrust your integrity as to insinuate that you could or would be influenced by improper motives, and I am astonished that the Mayor of our City should have so far forgotten the decencies of his position, and to express a suspicion that the Chairman, in the appointment of any Committee, would do injustice to any. He was willing the Chairman should consult whoever he thought proper to advise him, and had no fears of unworthy influences."

While this scene was being enacted, Mr. GEORGE TAYLOR, M. C. from Brooklyn, was in the immediate vicinity of the Chair, indulging in the most unequivocal demonstrations of the Chairman. He was a headstrong tyrant, who had made all his decisions on one side—and had neglected to appoint the Committee on the New-York seats only because he had not had an opportunity to consult the wire-pullers on the outside.

Mr. SICKLES endeavored to pacify his manly colleague, but to little purpose. "It's all very pretty for you to talk," says the outraged Mr. TAYLOR, "when the Chairman let you have the floor whenever you wanted it, and refused it to me." "Because I was always in order," blandly responded Mr. SICKLES, and then noticing the conflict in which WOOD and RYNDERS were engaged, he suggested that by retiring they would probably relieve the Chairman from a very embarrassing position, and so the crowd broke up, the Chairman looking thankful, the Mayor provoked, Capt. RYNDERS triumphant, TAYLOR indignant and SICKLES provokingly cool.

The mass of the members were promptly in their seats at 8 o'clock—the hour appointed for the reassembling, but it was more than an hour before the President resumed the Chair. It was understood that his protracted absence was caused by the difficulties he had encountered in making up the Committee on the New-York contest.

In the meantime Hon. D. S. DICKINSON came into the room. His appearance was the signal for protracted cheering, which had the effect to bring the leader of the Hards up on the platform, where he made one of the hardest speeches I ever heard—the old fellow apparently being determined to make up in adamantine sentiments the ground gained by the Softs in the organization.

When the President resumed the Chair, it soon became apparent that all the good feeling had been dissipated on the morning session. The country members were evidently becoming anxious to do up the work about which they were engaged, and there was much nervous anxiety apparent among the city class.

It was expected the first business in order would be the announcement of the Committees, but this expectation was not realized.

After two or three unimportant resolutions had been considered, Mr. SHAW was impelled to put in a resolve, requiring the proposed committee on New-York affairs to exact a pledge from all the contestants that they would abide the decision. This was a perfect firebrand which in an instant set the whole body in a blaze. JOSIAH SUTHERLAND gave it a tremendous broadside, in which there were several very damaging shots at old Tammany.

JOHN COCHRANE came to the support of the wigwam—spoke feelingly and eloquently of the service which she had rendered to the party—and lucidly argued the regularity of all her proceedings.

He was making quite an impression on the Convention on this point, until interrupted by Mr. GLOVER, who asked him if he did not bolt the regular Tammany Party once. JOHN bowed acquiescence, and sat down—of which Mr. SHAW took opportunity to withdraw his firebrand.

The tumult was immediately renewed, and if anything with increased vigor by the introduction of the resolutions offered by WALTER R. JOHNS, and amended by JOHN KELLY. Everybody was trying to obtain the floor—the vacant space in front of the platform presenting a perfect sea of upturned faces.

The storm raged fierce and bitter for about half an hour. It was in vain that the Chairman attempted to bring the Convention to order. Finally, as the fire appeared to burn out, Mr. SICKLES obtained the eye and the ear of the Chairman, and being awarded the favor, electrified the Convention by a hearty indorsement of the resolutions, which he hoped would be passed by a unanimous vote.

There was no resisting such an appeal—and acting on this suggestion, there was a determined and spontaneous call for the question. The resolution, as amended, was adopted by acclamation, and the Convention adjourned for tea.

After the adjournment, the Cooper Committee met in the rooms of Mr. SICKLES, and the Small men at Mayor WOOD's. Neither committee succeeded in complying with the expressed wish of the Convention previous to the hour of reassembling. It was understood a majority of the Cooper men were in favor of reporting their inability to agree, requesting the Convention to rescind the resolution, and to refer the troubles to a committee, as originally proposed. Six refused to agree in such a report and request, and they had sufficient influence to prevent its adoption.

When the Convention got together again, after tea, it was apparent the leaders did not intend to conclude the meeting with one day's work.

The organization of the Convention was perfected by providing for the appointment of Vice-Presidents, and there was a nice break over the resolution offered by Mr. LUDLOW, for the appointment by the Chair of a Committee, to draft resolutions, &c. Mr. GEORGE TAYLOR, M. C. from Brooklyn, offered an amendment, that the Committee be appointed by the Delegates from the various Judicial Districts. This was construed as a direct attack upon the Chair, by the Softs, who at once rallied to his support. Gov. SEYMOUR thought the amendment unfair, and Speaker LUDLOW called for the ayes and noes, which were ordered. The result was the defeat of Mr. TAYLOR by a majority of 32, the vote being 317 to 65.

After this little clearing up of the atmosphere, the Convention took a recess over to Friday morning.

The Proceedings.

[SPECIAL REPORT (FOR THE NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES.)]

SYRACUSE, Thursday, Sept. 10.

A few moments after 12 o'clock, the Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee called the Convention to order, and moved that Dr. TAYLOR, of Syracuse, be appointed permanent Chairman of the Convention.

A member inquired if the gentleman had not made a mistake. Did he not mean temporary Chairman.

No, he had made no mistake. He intended permanent, and so put the question. About twenty voted in the affirmative, and half that number in the negative. The motion was declared carried, and DEAN RICHMOND, of Genesee, Soft, and JOHN A. GREEN, of Onondaga, Hard, were appointed a Committee to escort the Chairman elect to the Chair.

Reaching the platform, Dr. TAYLOR thus returned his thanks for the honor which had been conferred upon him:

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN: For this expression of your confidence in selecting me to preside over your deliberations, be pleased to accept my thanks, and allow me to say that the first assembling in convention of the representatives of the Democratic Party of the State of New-York, since the highly excited and bitter political contest which resulted in placing in the Executive Chair of the Nation the able, experienced and accomplished statesman, JAMES BUCHANAN, [Loud cheers,] presents a fit occasion of mutual congratulation upon an event so auspicious to the preservation of the Union, the peace, and the general welfare of the Nation. [Applause.] We have occasion, gentlemen, for congratulation also in the firm determination manifested by the President to secure to the people of the territories the right unobstructed of determining for themselves the question which has given rise to so much agitation and excitement throughout the whole country. [Applause.] The voice of the majority once legally and fairly expressed must of necessity allay the excitement and strife in the Territories, and will, or ought to be, quietly acquiesced in by the people of all other localities.

The election of the President of the United States deserves particular attention from the affairs of our own State, and such was emphatically the case at the last Presidential election; but as the approaching election will be confined to State and county officers, we may expect that the people will turn their attention to matters in our own State more directly affecting her interests and welfare; and there, gentlemen, they will find abundant occasion for serious consideration. They will find a financial policy inaugurated by the leaders of the Whig Party, pursued by that party with a spendthrift prodigality, and which appears to be reaching its more perfect consummation under the new party name of Republican, which has resulted as was predicted by Democratic statesmen entertaining different and sounder views of finance, and the management of the public works, in an enormous and accumulating public debt, an empty treasury, diminished revenues, unfinished public works, and a burdensome and unequal taxation on the people. [Loud cheers.] Among the many things which may be worthy of your attention, and that of the people, might be enumerated a series of legislative acts, all supposed to tend to the same result. But, gentlemen, I need not detain you, and will not, with any extended remarks upon these topics. I will, therefore, only say that we may well remember that the unfortunate divisions of the Democratic Party have placed in the hands of our political opponents the opportunity of much bad management and legislation. [Applause.] With union and harmony in our councils, and a patriotic devotion to the welfare and the best interests of the State, we shall be able to present a ticket composed of men of Democratic principles, sound views of finance, inflexible integrity and honesty of purpose, [cheers,] and with such a ticket, worthy of public confidence, we may anticipate a favorable and successful result. I accept the position assigned me, gentlemen, with some embarrassment, growing out of the fact of my little acquaintance with parliamentary rules, not having had occasion to give any attention to them for a long time, but casting myself on your kind indulgence, and trusting in your coöperation, I will endeavor to discharge the duties of the Chair in an impartial manner, and with as much ability as I may command. [Loud cheers.]

ORGANIZATION.

After the Chairman had concluded his address, Mr. CAGGER took the floor for the purpose of making an explanation. He had made a slight mistake in making the motion for a permanent. It appeared that by an arrangement between the friends of DELOS DE WOLF, of Oswego, and the friends of Dr. TAYLOR, it was understood that Mr. DE WOLF should be nominated for temporary chairman—that Mr. DE WOLF should decline and nominate Dr. TAYLOR for permanent President. He, Mr. CAGGER, had misunderstood, and somewhat anticipated the first part of this arrangement. The result originally contemplated had been reached; but he deemed it necessary to make this explanation in order that there might be no ill feeling.

On motion, the following gentlemen were appointed Secretaries—each gentleman being named by a different individual, and apparently without any concert of action: William Jewett, of Onondaga; H. Hubbard, of Chenango; Luke D. Smith, of Oswego; William F. Russell, of Ulster; William Marshall, of Kings; and F. C. Brunck, of Buffalo.

A motion was then made to appoint a Committee to nominate Vice-Presidents, which Capt. RYNDERS moved to amend, that they should be appointed in the same manner in which the Secretaries had been chosen.

Both these motions were subsequently withdrawn, in order to permit the introduction of a resolution directing the Secretaries to call the roll of delegates by counties. This was adopted, but after being amended so as to direct the Secretaries to receive all persons as members, whose seats were not contested.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll, and without interruption reached the county of New-York. When New-York was called Mr. GEORGE TAYLOR, of Brooklyn, moved to appoint a Committee of ten to whom should be referred the credentials of those claiming to represent the City of New-York.

Mr. SICKLES desired to hand up to the Secretary a corrected list of the delegates from that City.

Mr. BAKER also desired to hand up a correct list of the delegates—the People's delegates.

Mr. MORANGE also desired to send up a correct list—the delegates appointed by the Committee of which WILSON SMALL, Esq., was Chairman.

A motion was now made, which was carried, that the County of New-York be passed over, and the remaining counties be called in their order.

The remainder of the roll of delegates was then called, when Mr. TAYLOR renewed his motion.

Mr. JOHN KELLEY said that it would be proper for each gentleman when his name was called from the City of New-York to present personally his credentials.

Mr. BAKER—Who will you make contestants? We claim seats as the only regular delegation.

Mr. MULLIGAN desired that a Committee should be appointed to receive credentials from New York and all other contested seats.

Mr. FAIRCHILD—I had supposed that all seats from the State of New-York were contested, and in such a case it is a proper rule to refer questions of that sort to a Committee appointed by the Convention. If we are mistaken—if it is true that there are no contested seats in the City and County of New-York, the Committee which shall be appointed by the Chair, or this Convention, will have little difficulty in settling matters. If it is true that there is but one, or even five, whose seats are contested, the Committee will have no difficulty in deciding who shall be admitted to the Convention.

Mr. KELLY thought that the gentlemen whose seats were not contested, should be allowed to take part in the discussion.

A DELEGATE—(Excited)—What is the motion before the Convention?

The PRESIDENT—The motion is made by the gentleman from Madison, (Mr. FAIRCHILD,) that there be a Committee of One appointed from each Judicial District to decide upon the contested seats of the City of New York. The gentleman from Westchester (Mr. EDWIN CROSWELL) moves as an amendment, the appointment of two from each Judicial District.

A DELEGATE—All the seats from New-York are contested.

Mr. JOHN KELLY—I should like to see any gentleman come forward and say that my seat is contested. [Applause.]

The Chair suggested that the districts in the City should be called by number, and if there were no contestants in any of the districts they would take their seats as such.

Mr. KELLY—I agree to all that, but I want any individual to come forward who, in person, will contest my seat.

The President—In order to facilitate business let the Secretary call the districts, and if there are any seats that are not contested let the gentlemen take their seats.

Mr. SICKLES—It is perfectly well known that every seat from New-York is contested. [Shouts of order, order.]

Mr. SICKLES—(To the President)—Am I out of order?

The CHAIR—No. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. SICKLES—I desire only to say that I am informed that there is upon the table before the Chair a list of three delegations claiming to represent the City and County of New-York.

A VOICE—There are four.

Mr. SICKLES—Well, four, then. "The cry is still they come." The course which has been suggested, to appoint a Committee to whom shall be referred the New-York case, they then to report to this Convention, is fair and just. We desire to occupy as little time as possible, and to present no question here that can disturb the harmony of its proceedings. By referring the whole question to a Committee you will dispose of it in a mode that will give fair play all round, and prevent much disagreement in this Convention. [Loud applause.]

Mr. MORANGE rose amid shouts of "Question, question," and the rising of several members from their seats, creating fearful confusion. I understand the motion, said he, of my friend Mr. EARLE, (Herkimer,) to be that where the seats are not contested, the delegate representing that Assembly District is to take his seat in this Convention, and to participate in its deliberations now. I believe it just, if his constituents have seen fit to send him here, that he should take his place.

Cries of "Question, question."

Capt. RYNDERS (to Mr. MORANGE)—What do you do here? I would like to know if you have come from New-York? [Cries of "Question, question," and great confusion.]

Mr. MORANGE—Yes, I did come from New-York, and you know it. I came here as delegate of the Wilson Small Committee. [Shouts of "Question, question, order, order," and "Why don't you sit down."]

Capt. RYNDERS—I have as much right to be heard as the gentleman. I am entitled to the same privileges as he is, and no man shall put me down unless we are placed upon an equal footing.

A VOICE—Who's got the floor. ["Order, order," shouting and stamping.]

Mr. MORANGE—I would ask you, Mr. Chairman,—[Shouts of "Order, order," and "Question, question."]

Mr. MULLIGAN (of Kings)—I renew my motion and call for the previous question.

The CHAIRMAN—The motion before the Convention is from the—

Mr. MORANGE—I would simply ask if I have not the floor?

The CHAIRMAN—(Peremptorily)—No, take your seat, Sir.

Mr. MORANGE—I would simply ask if I have not the floor?

The CHAIRMAN—Please to take your seat.

Mr. MORANGE—But surely I have as much right to be heard—

[Rap, rap, rap, from the gavel of the President, and shouts of "Question!" "Question!"]

The motion, with the amendment, was then put and carried.

Captain RYNDERS—I say that I honestly believe that Mr. KELLY's seat is not contested.

A delegate moved that a Committee of one from each Judicial district be appointed, except the third upon the contested seats in the County of Columbia.

Wm. H. LUDLOW, of Suffolk, moved that a Committee on Resolutions, to consist of one from each Judicial (except the first) District, be appointed by the chair.

Judge TAYLOR thought it would be better to postpone that matter for the present.

Mr. LUDLOW—In making that motion, I believe I am following out all the precedents of these bodies. It has never in my experience in State Conventions been the practice of holding off from the appointment of the usual Committee until the reports on the contested seats are all in. I do not believe that such a practice was ever adopted either in a State or National Convention. We desire to go on with the management of our business here. I regret in common with all the members of this Convention, this unfortunate division in New-York, but we are desirous of returning to our homes, and we do not propose to defer all the business of this Convention until the reports from Committees are decided on.

Mr. TAYLOR thought that such a course would inflict injustice on other counties.

It was moved that this resolution be laid on the table.

This was put and declared to be carried by the Chairman.

After the announcement that the motion was carried, several members requested the vote to be again put as they had misunderstood its object. [Loud cries to Mr. LUDLOW to withdraw his motion.]

Mr. LUDLOW—I have no disposition to oppose this motion to lay on the table, and assent to it; but I will not withdraw my motion.

The question was then put and it was laid on the table.

Mr. GEORGE TAYLOR moved that the Chairman now proceed to appoint the Committee on Credentials, and that a recess be taken for a certain period of time, until they were prepared to report.

A motion for an adjournment was here put and carried, amid the most exciting calls of the Chairman to appoint the Committee.

AN INTERLUDE SPEECH OF HON. DANIEL S. DICKINSON.

The Convention was adjourned until three o'clock, and punctual to that hour the Hall was crowded by the delegates and spectators. The President, however, not making his appearance until nearly four o'clock, Mr. DICKINSON, who was recognised by the assemblage and was loudly cheered, was called upon for a speech. He ascended the platform, and said:

My Fellow-Citizens, Delegates to the Convention, and Fellow Democrats: There is a statute in this State prohibiting the disturbing of religious meetings, and although this is not exactly of that character, if I supposed that I should have disturbed this meeting I would not have ventured to make my appearance [Laughter.] I came in to confer with some of my friends, and see how the delegates looked after the morning session, for it is not every day that we behold a Democratic Convention in the State of New York.

As the President of this Convention has not yet taken his seat, perhaps I may be indulged for a few moments in addressing you, thanking you for the kind and generous partiality that you have extended to me on my making my appearance in the Convention. [Cheers.] If I fail to appreciate it most deeply and most sensibly, I should be a great deal more or less than a man. I am gratified that you have proceeded thus far so harmoniously, and I look forward to the consummation of your labors here with renewed hope in the expectation that you will separate, firmly knit together in the bonds of friendship, to be eternal. [Loud cheers.] I see that this will be so, because we are all engaged in this great work, wishing to renominate a ticket, not for the purpose of bringing this or that individual before the country, but for the purpose of maintaining the ascendancy of Democratic principles—principles which we expect lie at the foundations of our Government—principles without the ascendancy of which we believe the Government cannot stand, or if it can stand, we do not believe it will be worth preservation. The theory of our Government resides in the great principles of equity which have always been adhered to by the Democratic Party. Look at the mis-called Republican Party at the present day. They are warring with more than savage ferocity on the Constitution under which they live, and which protects, shelters and supports them. And we need go no further than their last great act, as is manifested through some of their most learned and elevated citizens. I allude to the late address to the President of the United States, and signed by 40 clergymen; but they have received from him a severe and well-merited castigation. Never was a chastisement laid on so well as that, and I undertake to say it here, not only in a Democratic Convention, but before the American people, knowing what I say, and saying it with responsibility, that no document has been calculated to do as much good emanating from a responsible source since the days of Gen. JACKSON as that of Mr. BUCHANAN. It has been suggested that it was beneath the President to notice it. I do not so regard it. The doctrine that they have invoked in their letter has been promulgated in secret, emanating from our institutions of learning,—that has gone forth intimating its evil tendencies among the people, and has done more mischief than all other considerations put together. If Satan himself had been sent upon earth commissioned to sow dragon's teeth, and a licentious and destroying spirit upon the people, he could not better discharge his mission than preaching that false and spurious philanthropy. But it is like the pitcher sent too often to the well, that finally comes back broken. I hope that the President will be sustained. I know he will be by the feelings of the country. People will now be compelled to look this question in the face. This fanaticism—this spurious benevolence—has been put forward in this form, and sent to Mr. BUCHANAN, and, in the name of the American people, he has answered it successfully. My Democratic brethren, I invoke you in the spirit of true philanthropy, true justice and equity, and in the name of that Democratic benevolence which brings men all upon one great level, which consoles the down-trodden, and which pulls down tyranny, which is no respecter of persons, but which gives to every man equal rights and equal property, which regards this country as a great family of States, and which treats her states who possess the institution of Slavery as brethren, in theory and practice, as entitled to the same consideration that we have for our sisters. We are a Free State. The Southern States do not force into our Congress Slavery representation, Slavery canals, or any share of our system of building. We should not, therefore, interfere with them. They have the institution of domestic Slavery, not planted by themselves, but by that slave-hating Great Britain and Stuffed House morality. It is not our institution, but theirs. If it is found to belong to the States that have it, if it exists, it is theirs, and we need not answer for it, because, on the Great Day of Account we shall have enough to answer for ourselves. If it is a curse and a burden they introduced it, and not we.

Our object in coming here is to redeem the State of New-York, which will be accomplished by elevating Democratic principles and electing a good ticket. Let us have a good ticket. Let it be Democratic all over. Let it be Democratic above and below, and on both sides, horizontal and perpendicular, round and diagonal. Let it recognize no section of the party whatever, and in showing that it does not do so let it recognize every section. [Cheers.] With such a ticket and with such a spirit we can carry the State. [Applause.] The honorable gentleman having thanked the Convention for the patience they had manifested in listening to his remarks, and the President appearing and taking his seat, retired amid loud applause.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

On the reassembling of the Convention, Mr. GREENE, of Erie, submitted a resolution that the rules of the Assembly of this State be the rules of this Convention. This was adopted.

Mr. PURDY, of Chenango, offered the following resolution, which was laid on the table:

Resolved, That the Democratic State Committee consist of two from each old Senatorial District, and that the delegations from each District present the names of two members to this Convention.

Mr. SHAW, of Otsego, offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on the New York City contested seats are hereby instructed to consider and report upon the claims only of such sets of delegates as willingly pledge a full and entire submission to the will of this Convention so far as it may decide upon the question of regularity of Democratic local organization of that City.

SPEECH OF MR. JOSIAH SUTHERLAND.

If, said he, I understand the resolution, it means that the Committee that you are about appointing to take New-York matters into consideration and report, are to decide upon whom the people of the City shall support between those two organizations, and if this Convention shall decide it, I say this Convention has no power over that subject. I do not believe, whatever may be the result of the Committee on the New-York contested seats, or whatever may be their report, or whatever may be the action of this Convention thereupon, I do not believe there is one Democrat in New-York who will hesitate to support whatever nomination this Convention makes. But, Sir, I entirely deny the power of this Convention to compel us by anything it may say, or to compel the Democracy of New-York, to make a pledge that they shall support any particular ticket. I came here to make no pledges; I am not instructed or authorized to do so. Pledges are not democratic. The Democracy of New-York, if I should make a pledge, would vote for whom they chose. The only pledge that a Democrat gives is his democracy and his principles. [Applause.] It is really ingenious, anticipating the report of this Committee in favor of the Cooper Committee. The gentleman rises from this honored democratic institution of Tammany Hall and its sachems; rises here, and wants the thirty-five thousand Democrats of New-York, who have put their seal of condemnation upon that political anti-democratic close Corporation, that have shaken off the shackles that have bound them for twenty years; it was ingenious if they should be fortunate enough to preserve justice, truth and equity, and get a report in their favor, and exclude the Democratic General Committee of New-York, then to undertake to bind the Democracy. [Applause.] My constituents are scattered over two large Wards, and are they to go by the decision of gentlemen here, who, however respectable, can know nothing about the matter, and who have no power over our local organization. Sir, in the decision of this matter of Delegates, what is the power of this Convention? To decide who represents here the will of the people—the sovereigns of the country. [Cheers.] In getting up that decision you take democratic views as to the form in which that will is to come here, and hence comes up the question of irregularity, but beyond that you will turn this Convention into an institution worse than this political corporation which derives all its legitimate powers from the Legislature of your State.

Mr. JOHN COCHRANE here obtained the floor, but yielded to Mr. SHAW at his request. If, said Mr. S., I understand the gentleman correctly, he assumed the insinuation that the resolution had been introduced as rather an indorsement of the Cooper Committee. It bears no such thing upon its face, neither was there any such intention, and, in reply to a portion of the gentleman's remarks, it is enough to point back to the action of the Democratic National Convention. In regard to the State of New-York I think it a safe precedent at least to follow, and one in which I believe that the mass of the people in and out of New-York will accept. [Applause.]

SPEECH OF HON. JOHN COCHRANE.

Mr. COCHRANE said: I do not rise for the purpose of entering into any controversy upon the subject of the regularity or irregularity of Tammany Hall or fractions. I regret that the resolution which has been introduced, and which I confess seems to me proper as it was read, has precipitated to some degree this question of contest between us, and it is not meet, Sir, therefore, that while this language has been indulged in, although from the most proper and the best motive, that we should stand here from New York, representing different organized interests; yet I trust the same Democracy, and should permit that these reprehensible remarks in respect to our position should pass unnoticed. In regard to Tammany Hall, Sir, there is no language that can fortify her position. [Loud cheers.] There is not a Democrat in this land who is competent to the task of being the champion of that time-honored institution. "Close corporation," as she may be, if you refer to a legislature that so recently has been controlled by Black Republican votes, there she stands the representative of the Democracy of New-York not only, but also the steady supporter of the Democracy of the Union. I do not appeal to her reputation for her position to strengthen the attitude we occupy as her children. I believe in my inmost heart that we all truly mean to obey her precepts. [Cheers.] The gentleman on the other side during the last campaign which gave Mr. BUCHANAN the Presidency, hailed from Tammany Hall, and shall we who chance to be tomed upon local and temporary issues, here raise an hostile arm against each other, which so soon will be called upon to support the nominations of this Convention? No, it is not a question of principle. It is but a question of regularity, and to that question I understand the resolution to be addressed.

And is not this Convention the judge of the regularity of its officers? If not, why assemble? Your very acts last year and years before will but affirm the position that this Convention must of necessity judge of conflicting organizations in the counties, and if it were not, anarchy would be the result, and organization and discipline would be no more. The question is: It is notifying in language and presenting that principle which is commonly known to us all viz.: that this Convention when it acts, let its judgment be pronounced as it may, without regard to the result, should accept its acts as a work well done, and a step made in progress, so that when they come up here again the Convention will refer back to the actions of this and other Conventions and by its records read aright the story who is the recognized organization in New-York. [Loud cheers.]

Mr. GLOVER considered it highly improper to discuss the question of regularity before the whole Convention. The argument should be made before the Committee, who would then report. Then the Convention might discuss the question. [Loud cries of "Question, question," and great confusion.]

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN moved the previous question. [Hisses.]

A VOICE—What! are they going to put New-York down with her 40,000 Democratic votes. [Applause and tumult.]

At this juncture Mayor WOOD rose and was about to address the Convention, when he was interrupted by the President, who informed him that the previous question had been moved.

Here the whole body of the hall presented a scene of uproar which it is impossible to describe. Some members rushed from their seats, sprang into the open space in front of the President's desk and attempted to catch his eye, gesticulating violently. "Mr. President" and "Mr. Chairman" was shrieked by fifty delegates at a time, and cries for "Wood" were heard in from every direction. It had the previous question been withdrawn, and his Honor continued his cool, resolute a few moments to the confusion, and addressed the chair as follows:

THE MAYOR'S SPEECH.

Mr. President—Since the humiliating position which the City of New-York presents to the Convention and the public is given me to appeal to a Democratic State Convention as a delegate to any seat, is, Sir, that I am loth to rise to say but one word. The great City of New-York is entitled to rights upon this floor, and to be heard in this body. [Cheers.] "Shame" is upon hand, Sir, that that collective representative of the great Democracy of the Empire State must not be prepared to hear the voice of 40,000 Democrats, and I have yet to see that it is not right for the Convention to decide any question except that which is before it, and which is legitimately matter for its determination. This Convention is convened for nominating a Democratic ticket, and as a necessary part of that duty, it has a clear right to settle main questions of contested seats as may come before it. And that is the only question here now. The question is with reference to the settlement of the New-York contested seats. It has been said there have been several delegations contesting the right to seats here. It may be so. I understand that the Convention have provided a Committee to report upon that subject. Whether Richard Nat or John Doe is entitled to a seat is of no consequence. But it is to be determined whether he is the proper person, and has proper credentials. When you go beyond the legitimate question as to whether he is entitled to a seat, into local difficulties appertaining to the complicated affairs of Tammany Hall and the county of New-York, you are treading upon dangerous ground, varying beyond your province, and assuming that central power under which we in the City of New-York already suffer. We have submitted no such question.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN—(Interrupting)—I moved the previous question. [Applause and laughter.]

THE MAYOR—Then I have nothing further to say. His Honor resumed his seat, amid laughter.

Mr. WALTER R. JOHNS of New-York offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That inasmuch as the names of the Democracy of the City and County of New-York are drawn in question, and as principles being involved in the present contest, we hereby invite the Democracy of the Empire State, in the various organizations of that City and County, to be represented in this Convention, that the decision of this Convention may be based on the report from the name of a representative Democracy, and not upon the representation of a portion only of the Democracy of the City in the Convention.

Mr. KELLY moved to lay the resolution on the table.

THE SPANISH-MEXICAN DISPUTE.

The Europa's mails reached this City yesterday afternoon from Boston. We publish below some interesting details of the Telegraphic summary from Halifax that has already appeared.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post, writing on the 27th ult., gives the following Indian news in addition to the London dispatches already published:

[illegible] and Lucknow, out at Bareilly and Rohilcund, [illegible] they had been incorrectly represented. The Government [illegible] authority on Indian affairs in [illegible] the rest anxious about the passage of troops through the Isthmus of Suez, says that the army of Oude (30,000) has, beyond all doubt, [illegible] in communication with the insurgents of Delhi.

In regard to the Question of the Principalities that has lately caused such a tempest in the political world of Europe, the Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 8th ult., says:

In accordance with instructions he has just received, the Turkish Ambassador at Paris has informed the Emperor's Government of the Sultan's consent to annul the Moldavian elections, in compliance with the wishes of the four Powers. By this arrangement England and Austria may be said to be ignored. Their representatives at Bucharest appear to have done nothing towards re-establishing unanimity of action. After the harmonious concert at Orsova, this note from the Bosphorus rather jars upon the ear. The difficulty, however, is at an end, and the French Government holds itself satisfied.

Private letters from Madrid continue to speak of Palace intrigues in opposition to the Narvaez Ministry, and to which the Queen, with her well-known love of intrigue, complacently lends herself.

According to the last accounts from Teheran, a rather sharp struggle was going on between Mr. Murray and the Russian Ambassador. The following extract is taken from the Constantinople correspondence of the Observatore Triestino:

When Mehemed Ali, the Persian prime minister of the Shah, visited Mr. Murray on his arrival at Teheran, the latter complained that the Persian government had not only not evacuated Herat, but had reinforced the garrison of that city, although England had fulfilled all the conditions of the treaty. The Persian replied that as Prince Mograb Mirza had repeatedly refused to quit Herat, troops had been sent to force him to do so. Mr. Murray was dissatisfied with the answer, and peremptorily demanded the immediate evacuation of Herat and the withdrawal of the army commanded by Mograb Mirza from its fortress.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post states that the Emperor of Russia has decided not to meet the Emperor Napoleon at Chalons, but at some town in Germany, which has not yet been decided upon.

The Danish Government has given orders for a body of troops to put themselves in march towards Holstein. The decision, taken at a moment when the States are assembled at Itzehoe, has produced considerable sensation.

THE INDIAN REBELLION.

THE MASSACRE AT CAWNPORE.

From the London Times, Aug. 28

By a strange inconsistency, of the two dispatches that arrived on Wednesday night from Trieste, the one addressed to the Foreign-Office did not contain what appears with such and prominence in that sent by our own agent—he surrender, and subsequent massacre, of the garrison of Cawnpore. Nana Sahib, the fiend who dragged 125 European fugitives, chiefly women and children, from boats on the Ganges, to the parade ground of Cawnpore, and there murdered the whole in one helpless mass, has had a second opportunity of the same kind, and has made the same use of it. At the date of the first affair it was said that he had a very large force, the nucleus being a body of trained men, with artillery, which we English at home hear with astonishment he had been permitted to keep about him a long time, though known to be a bitter enemy of the British rule, and with what he considered a strong private grievance. It is hardly possible to canvass what is matter wholly inscrutable. The only answer is that such things are common in India, and India is not like England. Thank Heaven, England is not like India, and we remember with gratitude the parting remark of Henry VII. to a nobleman whose hospitality he had been enjoying, and who, in defiance of a recent act, escorted him with a body of armed retainers out of his demesne: "My Attorney-General will speak to you of this;" as indeed he did with a vengeance. Besides his own ordinary body-guard, this man, who has always had the worst reputation, seems gathered all sorts of irregulars, and it is to be presumed a good portion of the mutineers from Bareilly, Delhi, Cawnpore, the 1st, 3d and 5th Native Infantry, the 3d Light Cavalry, and two companies of Artillery. It is not very clear what force Sir Hugh Wheeler had with him, as the accounts do not agree, and are evidently conjectural. According to the Bombay Times, part of Her Majesty's 10th Regiment and a battery of European Artillery were on the spot at the time of the original outbreak, and a repetition of the tragedies at Meerut and Sujahanpore thereby prevented. There was, however, several days' fighting, and, though the mutineers were driven out of the place, many on our side are said to have fallen. Our own Bombay correspondent, writing on the 26th of June, says: "Cawnpore, we believe, has been saved by the arrival of the 84th and of the 64th, the latter from Bombay;" yet, though their destination might be Cawnpore, they do not appear to have reached it in time to prevent the catastrophe. They have had a share in avenging it, as far as that has been done. The precise order of events at that place we shall probably know on Saturday, but the general outline given in the dispatch is most lamentable. The garrison, being reduced to famine, capitulated to Nana Sahib, on the solemn assurance that their lives should be spared, and were immediately massacred, this being, such is the stereotyped form of words that one is almost tempted to write them. The same thing has occurred a thousand times before in Indian history, and, under given circumstances, will always be repeated. We cannot help wishing it may turn out that Sir Hugh Wheeler had been killed before the capitulation, and that he finished his long and brilliant career still as a soldier, and not as the helpless victim of a hideous butchery. His history is remarkable. He was a soldier of the Lake days. He entered the army in 1803, joined his regiment at this very station of Cawnpore, and marched thence under Lord Lake, now 54 years ago, to the conquest of Delhi. He had distinguished himself since in Afghanistan and elsewhere, and his long term of service comprised almost half the period of our rule in India.

We will own to a melancholy satisfaction in the thought that, by the breach of this capitulation, we are now at liberty to deal with Nana Sahib according to all the laws of peace and of war. We should, indeed, be sorry to be under any obligation or in any sort of covenant with one deliberate murderer of more than a hundred women and children. It is difficult indeed to imagine how Sir H. Wheeler, or the surviving officer in command, could either trust such a man or wish to enter into terms with him. On this point we hope to be better informed than we are. But, however that may be, Nana Sahib has released us from all obligation; and if he, or one of his grand, escape the halter, it must only be because the bullet or the bayonet has been beforehand with it. We trust that England will spare no cost of men or of money to vindicate justice and humanity upon the person of this savage and his myrmidons. Extraordinary crimes require extraordinary penalties; and, if we mean to sustain the British rule or human nature itself, in any wholesome sense of that term, on Hindostan, we must make a signal example of the men who have offered these affronts upon it. We occasionally hear whispers about cheap sentiments of mercy and pity for these men. Whatever we may desire for their souls, it is plain matter of business what we have to do with their bodies, and not only bodies, but the world, will be intolerable if we neglect our duty to them. Nothing else will tell on the Mahomedan or the Hindoo. For our religion, our city teaching and preaching, they have an utter contempt. Fortunately they understand what it is to be hanged, and have a particular objection to it. Indeed, we have heard it cly some earnest remonstrances against the application of this process to persons so keenly sensitive of its disgrace. That punishment, therefore, is reserved for the purpose. What we have to teach the followers of Mahomet and the worshippers of Vishnu is that, whatever their creed or their caste, we treat murderers as we do dogs, and in all moral respects rate them a great deal lower.

We cannot help making a comment on the remarkable difference between the two telegraphic despatches laid upon our table the one under the other in our yesterday's column. The first was a gift from Government, and therefore, it may be said we might look for criticism a little too sharply. Government, however, would only be too thankful for any suggestions that will enable its servants to do their work better. The second despatch which only arrived at this office at 5 A. M. yesterday, when our paper was already at press, is an example of good work, and of adaptation to its purpose, telling its tale shortly and distinctly. Instead of setting generally that Delhi still holds out, it particularizes with very few more words, that the enemy had made three more sorties, in all of which they were totally defeated, and inflicted heavy loss. It then states expressly the sad fate of the garrison at Cawnpore, which the Government despatch supposed to be known, and therefore left uncertain. It contains the very encouraging fact of the 81st Regiment at Sangor, under their native officers alone, driving the revolted 42d out of the station. Another omission is important, though the fact was perhaps supposed to be known. Not a word is said in either despatch as to the fate of the French, and the incomprehensible voyage of the soldiers and crew back to Suez. To-morrow, however, will solve this enigma.

SKETCH OF THE LATE SIR HUGH WHEELER.

From the London Times

Major General Sir Hugh Massy Wheeler, K.C.B., whose melancholy death at Cawnpore has followed so closely upon the honor which we have sustained in the persons of Sir H. M. Lawrence and General Barnard, was one of the most distinguished officers in the Indian service, as he proved in the Sikh war. He was thrown of the late Captain Hugh Wheeler, of the Indian army, and grandson of Mr. Frank Wheeler, of Ballywire, County of Limerick, by Margaret, eldest daughter of the Right Hon. Hugh, first Lord Massy in the Irish Peerage. He was himself born at Ballywire in 1789, so that at the time of his death he had reached his 68th year. He received his early education at Richmond, Surrey, and at the Grammar-School, Bath. He entered the military service of the East India Company in 1808, when he received his first commission in the Bengal Infantry. In the same year he embarked with a regiment under Sous Lake against Delhi. Having been already through the intermediate ranks, he became Captain of the 60th Bengal Native Infantry in 1826, and in the same year was appointed Major of Brigade to the Bengal Army, in which capacity he served through the campaign in Ava, in 1826, in command of a brigade of field forces in 1829, in Assam against the Burmese, in Bhurtpore, 1825, previous to the hard-fought battles of Moodkee and Ferozeshah, the gallant General (then Brigadier) Wheeler, with a force of 4,000 men and 31 guns, covered the village of Sobraon, where the large depôt of stores had been collected for the army under Sir Henry Hardinge, Lord Gough, and Sir Harry Smith, and thus rendered important services which contributed in their measure to the gaining of those victories. He received the order of the Bounee Empire in 1846, and was honored a few years since for his distinguished merits by being appointed one of the Aides-de-Camp to Her Majesty. Having been repeatedly thanked by the Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief for his valuable services in the Sikh campaigns and in the conquest of the Punjab he was created a Knight Commander of the Bath of 1858, and since that time has held command of the district of Cawnpore.

The Indian dispatches during the war in the Punjab show that these honors were by no means cheaply earned by General Wheeler. In October, 1848, he effected the reduction of the strong fortress of Rungur Nuggul with only the loss of a single man, and by his conduct on this occasion earned the warmest approval of Lord Gough, then Commander-in-Chief, who formally congratulated the Brigadier on the result, which, in his opinion, was "entirely to be ascribed to the soldier-like and judicious arrangements of that gallant officer." In the following month of November, in a dispatch addressed to the Governor General, Lord Gough states that he "has directed the Adjutant-General to convey to Brigadier General Wheeler his heartiest congratulations and thanks for the important services which he and the brave troops under his command have rendered in the reduction of the fortress of Kullalwalha," again with the loss of only one man killed and five wounded. Again, in a dispatch from the Adjutant-General to the Governor General, dated "Camp before Cutlanwallah, Jan. 30, 1849," it is stated that Brigadier Wheeler, in command of the Punjab Division and of the Jullunder field force, supported by Major Bowlby and Lieutenant Hodson, assaulted and captured the heights of Dalla in the course of his operations against the rebel Ram Singh, in spite of the difficulties presented by rivers almost unfordable and mountains deemed impregnable. And, finally, in the general order issued by him on the receipt of the dispatch of Sir W. Gilbert, K.C.B., announcing the termination of hostilities in the Punjab, the Governor-General thus expresses himself: "Brigadier General Wheeler, C.B., has executed the several duties which have been committed to him with great skill and success, and the Governor-General has been happy in being able to convey to him his thanks thus publicly."

It only remains to be added that, unlike Sir Henry Lawrence, Sir James Outram, and most other distinguished Indian officers, the services and reputation of Gen Wheeler were almost wholly of a military character, and that he does not appear to have been employed in political or diplomatic situations. But even if this be so, the military reputation which he has left behind him is of the highest order.

POSTION AND PROSPECTS AT DELHI.

From the London Times, Aug 27.

The Bombay mail arrived at Suez six days after the arrival of that from Calcutta, and brings us news from Delhi down to the 14th of July. At that date, it appears, we were still waiting for reinforcements, as, owing to the extent of our own positions to be protected, no more than 2,000 Europeans could be spared for an effective attack on the city. On the scale of the calculations made in the not very different case of Sebastopol, this would not necessarily imply a less aggregate than 7,000 Europeans in the camp, the last estimate reported. The death of Sir H. Barnard took place on the 5th, so that his successor, General Reed, had been nine days in command at the last date. The garrison of Lucknow, in the words of the dispatch, was "still holding out," after the loss of its lamented commandant on the 4th.

* * * *

The calculations of the force necessary for an effective attack upon Delhi throw a strong light on the folly of maintaining large fortified towns. With what view were the fortifications of a city containing 200,000 bigoted enemies of the British rule, with six miles of circuit, carefully repaired and strengthened with bastions, dikes, martello towers? There can be no doubt that 2,000 British soldiers could soon effect a lodgment on the ramparts, but they would be lost in the city, which is probably every day adding to its internal defences, at the cost of the peaceable and more wealthy inhabitants. A place of this sort requires a large army both to take it and to hold it; and in our position we have both to take it and to hold it, for we have to occupy the city and maintain a good position outside it for some time. The British army has to get into the city and protect its camp outside till the process is complete. It is, however, the old delusion of war-mongers, and their judicial blindness, always to be supposing one enemy and one species of warfare. No doubt, the anticipated foe was a foreign one, advancing from the northwest, and it was taken for granted that a common sense of danger would unite against him the British and the native soldier. This unanimity was indispensable, for it now appears that Delhi must fall to the more numerous host, and there would never be such a force of British soldiers there as to dispense with native aid. But, granting the necessity of a large strength and depôt, there certainly was no need why we should encumber ourselves with the protection of 200,000 civilians, who would never be of any use, and were always ready to turn against us. Of course, when we have taken the city we shall know what to do with it, but we shall acquire that knowledge at a rather disproportionate cost.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH ON THE MUTINIES.

From the London Times.

* * * We cannot wonder that Her Majesty left other lips to tell how deeply she is affected by these events. But as if from her lips, and with all the devotion due to a Sovereign and a lady, we accept the solemn appeal, when Queen Victoria commands her servants to inform Parliament that she will omit no measure calculated to quell these grave disorders, and is confident that, with the blessing of Providence, the powerful means at her disposal will enable her to accomplish that end. Yes, our cause is just. On the whole, we have been benefactors to India. We have long maintained peace, and even prosperity, among those countless millions. Change their manners we could not. There is not the thought of war on tyranny to paralyze our arm. What then, need we fear? Not the murderers of unarmed men, of women, and children,—not beings who can devise and perpetrate atrocities that even the stern red Indian, as we were told the other day, would recoil from.

We venture to back up this appeal from the Throne with an expression of our own earnest wishes, and confident hopes that during the recess her Majesty's Government will draw without stint on their Parliamentary powers, and the resources of the country. We trust that nothing short of necessity will be allowed to limit the scale of our armaments for the East. We have not merely to reconquer strong positions and extensive districts, not merely to destroy some fifty regiments of treacherous and cowardly mutineers, not merely to chastise and terrify into submission independent princes, numerous contingents, crowds of irregulars, whole tribes of robbers and murderers, and a population naturally apt to side with the strong; but, more than all, we have to perform in the eyes of the world, and for the benefit of the human race, a tremendous act of vengeance. England, religion, and civilization, have received the most intolerable insult that Mahomedan fanaticism could devise in a systematic series of deliberate brutalities on European women and children. Throughout all the East this is the particular mode of expressing the utmost national scorn and defiance. A people, it is there felt, that cannot, or does not choose, to protect and avenge its women, is no people at all, and unfit to be served or obeyed. The Mahomedans of every class do not allow their women to be seen by the eye of man, and nowhere is this scruple so strong as in Hindostan, where even Turks and Persians are thought less refined. However disorderly an old Begum may be, —and some of them are something extraordinary in this way,—wherever she goes curtains and draperies must protect her from the profanation of male eyes. In various less settled districts of Hindostan, —Rajpootana, for instance,—where the state of society makes it difficult to protect women from insult, it is customary to destroy most female infants, in order to prevent what would be a disgrace to the tribe, but which a foe would always, for that reason, be ready to perpetrate. Now, we in India stand in this respect on tender ground. They cannot understand, though to a certain extent they envy, the freedom of our female society. But this is the particular point on which they hold us most accessible to insult, and accordingly the native journals have always been full of the most scandalous libels upon English ladies. Balls, pic-nics, morning calls, and every occasion on which English gentlemen and ladies are one another, are continually recorded with malicious additions. There can be no doubt of a design in the horrors committed on our women and girls; and, if there were any doubt, it would be removed by the manner and method which had been deliberately adopted. It ought to be known, reluctant as we are to tell it, that the women and unmarried girls who fell into the hands of the mutineers and populace of Delhi were carried in procession for hours through the chief thoroughfares of the city, with every horror that could degrade them in the eyes of the people, previous to the last brutalities and cruelties that then, in the sight of thousands, were perpetrated upon them. It was done of settled purpose, to degrade England, to degrade Europe, to degrade a Christian empire and a Christian Queen. Now, we say it after full deliberation, and with a due regard to the objections always forthcoming against any real and effectual policy, that not one stone of that city should be left upon another. Delhi should for the future be only known in history as Sodom and Gomorrah, so that its place shall not be known. We are well aware that this will try the fidelity of some friends, but they cannot really be our friends if they wish to preserve the memorial of our disgrace. It must be fully explained to them that no disrespect shall be intended to the Mahomedan dynasties or the Mahomedan religion, but we desire also that no disrespect shall be intended or permitted to us. An execution of this solemn character is not to be performed without a proper funeral; but, if thirty thousand British soldiers are required to keep order on the occasion, we trust that no Englishman would be found to grudge a year's more Income-tax that this work may be done. It will be the eighth time that Delhi has been destroyed, and never before was its destruction so merited. All Asia will be wiser and better for the example.

A REPLY TO THE RUSSIAN VIEW OF THE INDIAN MUTINIES.

From the London Times.

We extracted at length, in our impression of Wednesday last, a communication made in the form of a regular dispatch to the Court of Russia from its Foreign correspondent at Madrid. The document expressly purports to be a Tuscan story, and circulated in such a quarter, representing the position and prospects of the British in India, it must be a matter of interest, if not more than mere curiosity, to know what the Russians think and we are bound to say that, upon the whole, the description and conclusions given in the report are less perverted and more impartial than might have been anticipated. India, it is true, is not the theatre of the most horrible crimes and atrocities from Cape Comorin to the foot of the Himalayas, for over the larger portion of this territory the authority of the British Government has either remained unassailed or been successfully asserted; but, though the case is so far exaggerated, the proceedings of the insurgents are justly characterized, and not extravagantly considered. In announcing the result of his observations, the writer puts aside altogether the defects attributed to the organization of the Bengal Army, and ascribes the outbreak to causes which, with one exception,—the licentiousness of the native press—he derives from the systematic policy of the Indian Government. He alleges, as a principal explanation of the rebellion, that we have treated native Princes with injustice by annexing their territories to our own, and disinheriting some of their widows and representatives, and that we have grasped with too unscrupulous an ardor at the hoards which these petty chieftains occasionally accumulate. This, in point of fact, forms the substance of his accusation; for, though he charges the authorities with bad faith towards the Sepoys in two, and only two, instances, he evidently relies upon our acquisitive propensities as furnishing the gravamen required.

We may be excused, under the circumstances, for alluding, in the first place to the charges which this indictment does not contain. We are not accused of mal-administration, of oppressing the people by taxation, of being indifferent to their wants, or disregarding their welfare. Not a syllable is said in disparagement of the general relations maintained between the Indian Government and its subjects, while it is freely admitted that the native press abused its privileges by traducing and reviling the authorities of the country. Although our rule is that of our conquerors, we are not charged with any tyrannical use of power, excepting on the points referred to, nor is it in any way insinuated that the hundred millions of Hindoos subject to the sceptre of Britain have any reason to be discontented with the dominion under which they live. These omissions in the mouth of a censor convey, we think, no faint praise, and may serve to convince the world that the onslaught we are now resisting, though it may have been facilitated by errors of policy, has not been provoked by misrule.

On the subject of our alleged encroachments, we venture to say that the territorial distribution of India still actually existing is sufficient to rebut the charge, at the same time that the known circumstances of the revolt imperatively forbid us to attribute its outbreak in any degree to causes deduced from such assumptions. For a whole century we have now been the strongest power in a country where might has for ages been accounted equivalent to right, and where the tenure of all dominion was so precarious that 50 years' possession was thought to come into a notable long-existence. For a long time past we have been absolutely supreme—so supreme that our will was law, while our acknowledged position as Sovereigns paramount entitled us to the rights of supremacy and reversion over all the territories of India. Yet, With these chances in our favor, and with the stimulus incessantly arising from the spectacle of misgoverned provinces, and the convictions of mistaken policy, we have not only tolerated but even protected against the retributive wrath of their own subjects scores of Princes whose title to dominion were founded in many instances either on recent usurpation or violent conquest. Until the eclipse of Nagpore, a short time since, the whole centre of the Peninsula was absorbed by the Mahratta States and the dominions of the Nizam. The spacious districts of Rajpootana are still studded with Hindoo Principalities, and many a Rajah of whose very name Englishmen are ignorant lives under the ægis of British supremacy in a pomp and affluence which might rank with those of European Sovereignties. If at last we terminated misrule in Oude by the deposition of a Prince whose ancestor we ourselves had created, we make bold to say that under no Government but ours would a State so situated such a charge-sterized have been tolerated so long. An Oriental Envoy once, on observing the riches of gold and jewelry displayed in the shops of the metropolis, remarked to his attendant that our Queen could have very little power, implying that under a Government of his own conception such tempting treasures would have been promptly appropriated by the Monarch on the throne. To Asiatic eyes our rule in India must offer analogous examples of forbearance, and the very catalogue of Rajahs and millionaires for whose hoards we are said to be gaping ought to speak for the justice of that Government under which, for the first time in Indian history, such acquisitions have been permanently secure.

In refutation of the statement that the rankings of injustice in the breasts of deposed families have created the insurrection now raging, we need only point to the notorious fact that the great landholders and chieftains, as a body, have stood aloof from the rebellion. That Asiatics, whose very life is intrigue, and who revel with all the sensations of luxury in the turbid waters of a revolution, should abstain in every instance from the participation in the troubles now pending was never to be imagined; but the instances of defection have been so few, and the examples of fidelity, whatever motives grounded—so numerous, as to prove beyond the possibility of doubt that the revolt neither originated with this class of men nor meets with their support. Here and there, where the successes of a mutinous soldiery have destroyed for a moment the authority of the Government, a native chieftain may avail himself of the opportunity which others have created for him; but that these Princes, where they have risen at all, have followed the revolt, and not led it, is as plain a fact as evidence can constitute. Ditto, indeed, would a wealthy Rajah gain by the proclamation of a Mahomedan Emperor under the auspices of a ravenous army!

When we turn to the remedial measures which the correspondent of the Nord conceives to be required for the settlement of India under that restoration of our supremacy which he plainly regards as incontestable, we discern still more distinctly how little can really be alleged against us. We are not told to reform our Administration, to remodel our Government, or reconsider our system of taxation as affecting the natives at large. We are not even advised to observe greater moderation in dealing with the Princes of the country. We are simply told to maintain a somewhat larger European force, to develop railways and other means of internal communication, and to organize, both provincially and municipally, a good body of police. It is not improbable that the measures actually adopted may coincide with the recommendations here given, but to refer to them as indicating the policy required for the future tranquility of India is equivalent to an admission that there are no greater errors of Government to be rectified. We have kept too small a number of European troops in India, beyond a doubt; we have not pushed on railway enterprise with sufficient vigor, and the police of Hindostan might be assimilated with great advantage to the police of the Punjab; but, if these are the only points on which, after a century's possession of Asiatic Empire, we are called upon to amend our ways, we do not think that either England or her Indian Administrators have much to be ashamed of.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

A PRACTICAL SUGGESTION.

Our readers will scarcely require to be told that in a matter of such absorbing interest as the recent failure of the attempt to connect the Old and New World, we are inundated with suggestions from all quarters for the completion of the great scheme. The following is from a correspondent, who does not wish his letter to appear, though it nevertheless contains the only sensible and feasible suggestion that has been made. He is very properly of opinion that the breaks for regulating the paying-out of the cable should not be left to the judgment and attention of any man, no matter how great his skill, but that they should be governed by a self-acting apparatus, operated on by a float on the surface of the water, that would, of course, feel the slightest variation in the immersion of the stern of the ship. As this suggestion, next to devising a cable to be paid out without the use of breaks at all, is the most practical that has yet been made, and as it is perfectly easy to see how the necessary apparatus could be devised for effecting it, we willingly give it a place in our columns.

TELEGRAPH TO INDIA—DISPOSITION OF THE CABLE.

There are persons now prepared to lay a very small expense, in a very short time, and by methods which seem palpably practicable, to bring India into such connection with England that messages may be sent one day in Calcutta may be known that day in London. Of course, the agency is the use of the Telegraph; there is nothing new in the principle, but there is something very striking in the coincidence by which the facilities in question have been created. At the southeastern corner of the Mediterranean lies the port of Alexandria. From Suez, at the opposite side of the narrow isthmus which connects Africa with Asia, to Aden, our own settlement, at the outlet of the Red Sea, the distance is less than 1,500 miles; from Aden to Kurrachee—the most convenient port of India—the mileage is about the same; so that the space to be traversed between Alexandria, a point almost at our door, and Kurrachee, a town standing on the Indus itself, assumes no very considerable proportions, and is besides divided admirably for the purposes in view. But thousands of miles of cable are not to be laid at a moment's notice? As it happens, they are. The Atlantic Telegraph Company, in the exercise of their own discretion, have decided on not immediately resuming the attempt to connect England with the United States, and their cable is disposable for a similar enterprise in another direction. We said the cost would be small. The fact will be admitted when we state that £255,000—little more than the amount of which a single railway company was robbed by a single servant—will link Alexandria with Aden. The connection of Aden with Kurrachee will be more costly by £100,000; but £355,000, would complete the business; and as pilots are the prospects, and so confident the projectors, that London, if it is distinctly averred, could be brought within a week's distance of Calcutta almost as soon as the crops now leaving those shores will arrive before Delhi. To speak more precisely to the point, we are assured that this most feasible communication can be actually established before the end of the present year.

The Spanish Dispute with Mexico.

DEPARTURE OF THE NEW CAPTAIN-GENERAL OF CUBA—THE MEDIATION OF FRANCE AND ENGLAND.

Paris (Aug. 27) Correspondence of the London Times.

Dispatches from Madrid announce that General Lersundi, who is appointed Captain General of the Island of Cuba, will sail in the course of September for his new destination, and that he will take with him the final instructions of the Madrid Government with respect to the dispute with Mexico.

The papers say that, Señor Lafragua, instead of coming to Paris, has gone to Cadiz, and it is added that he was to embark there for his own country. His friends at Paris seem in the dark as to his movements. We have nothing more of the mediation of England and France in this quarrel, but there is not the slightest doubt that it was accepted, however reluctantly, by Spain, and that the conference was fixed to be held at Paris. There have been reports afloat that Spain had again changed her mind, but the same powerful arguments that induced her to accept the mediation still exist. Whenever the conference is held, it would seem natural that Señor Lafragua should come to Paris as a person completely in possession of the facts of the case, and highly capable of representing Mexico in the matter, as he has already represented her at Madrid throughout the tedious non-official negotiation that took place there this Summer.

Quarrel Between Naples and Sardinia.

Paris (Aug. 29) Correspondence of the London Times.

For the last few days the Turkish difficulty has been the absorbing topic, and scarcely any one has noticed a small cloud that has been gathering in another quarter. There is bad blood between the Courts of Naples and Turin, and diplomatic intercourse has become envenomed. The bone of contention is the steamer Cagliari and the Sardinian passengers who were captured on board her. Piedmont insists that ship and prisoners shall at once be given up, and certainly, if the published accounts of the manner in which the Cagliari was seized by the Neapolitans be strictly correct, the persistence is reasonable and should be complied with. But Naples is said to have replied to the demand by an insinuation that the Piedmontese Government might have done more than it did to prevent the recent revolutionary attempts in Italy. Thus, at least, it has been stated in certain foreign papers.

I am assured that the King of Sardinia is disposed to carry matters with a high hand, and he is said to be determined, if Naples refuses his request, not only to withdraw his Ambassador, but also to declare war. One has a difficulty in believing that he would so promptly adopt so strong a measure. I need hardly point out that, if he did, the affair would be most serious. Austria, however, is by no means desirous of seeing things come to such a pass, and is doing her utmost to make up the quarrel. The latest accounts received in Paris are a shade more favorable than the preceding ones to a peaceable settlement of the quarrel, but there are still grounds for some little uneasiness.

The Georgia Railroad Story Revived—An Amende Honorable.

From the Special Correspondent of the London Times.

Macon, Ga., Thursday, July 23.

In going from Augusta to Savannah, and thence to Macon, the traveler passes over the whole of the line on which Mr. Arnoweaver had that dreadful vision of revolver fights, duels, murders, and infanticide, by the description of which he made this Georgian railroad more talked of for a time than if it had paid a 20 per cent. dividend. The story startled the British public, and considerably amused the Americans. It excited some curiosity to know on what it could be founded. It is quite useless to inquire; the narrative has not the foundation whatever in it is a mere hallucination. It is not easy to prove a negative, but not difficult to ascertain that a waking dream is not a reality, however vivid it may have appeared to the person visited by it. The officers of the line and the conductor of the train in which the series of tragedies is supposed to have occurred have already formally denied the truth of the statement; two of the passengers by the same cars, on the same night, are still residing in the Macon, respectable men of business, and their direct testimony as to the utter baselessness of the narrative would satisfy any court of law or Jury in the world.

It is a gross waste of time to pursue the absurdity further in the way of disproof. Nothing of the kind has occurred on the line from the day it was opened; the nature of the delusion and the motive for publishing such a monstrous tissue of fiction remain wholly intelligible, but the people of Georgia have expiated in any reasonable manner here, in the locality itself, as in England. It is supposed that the author of it may, on some occasion, have been told a dreadful tale, which so forcibly impressed him that he reproduced it, with the slight addition of making himself an eye-witness of facts, instead of an auditor of fables; that he somewhere supped full of horrors, and, having a good digestion for such a diet, so thoroughly assimilated them that they became part of himself, and were recorded as experience.

This dreadful night ride, with its pistol fights and massacres, was in reality a quiet ordinary journey between two commercial towns, with the average number of peaceable citizens, and involved no more alarming incidents than would be likely to occur on the same number of miles by the Great Western. One of my informants was in the baggage car, in which one of the duels, I believe, is supposed to have been fought, during the entire trip, and was not disturbed by any terrific combat. The baggage-car is the smoking room of the trains, and parties occasionally retire thither with "refreshments." It should be stated also that a bottle of champagne is known in these parts as a "Monte Christo pistol," a brand of that wine bearing the name of Dumas' hero. In the narrative this pleasant and harmless article figures as a lethal weapon, making but a slight report, and therefore used by the hostile parties as convenient for quiet fighting. With the addition of as many "dead men" stretched on the boards as there are empty bottles left behind some traces of a prior mystification or mistaking figurative language for literal description become apparent; and some of the sanguinary horror is wiped out of the story. Encounters with the Monte Christo weapon in the baggage wagon are, I understand, not uncommon on the line. The courteous President of the Company has, I believe, more than once been engaged in them; but he assures me no fatal results have ever occurred.

But whatever may have been the origin of the narrative, with its public murders without witnesses, and bodies that never seem to have been buried by the friends of the defunct, the whole thing has very nearly been fully confirmed, with additions; and in this manner: It amused excessively a select circle of youth in Savannah, who have more time on their hands than billiards can usefully occupy; feeling that the author of the tale rather required backers, one of them invented a clergyman, and in his name wrote to Mr. Arnoweaver in England, tendering corroborative testimony as a fellow-passenger. The offer was gratefully accepted, and in performance of it, documents and affidavits testifying to the truth of the well-known details were prepared, which would have deepened the mystery. But one of those mere accidents, that defeat the best-laid conspiracies, large or small, intervened; the device of the fictitious clergyman became known to some persons at Liverpool, before his documents could be dispatched, and the scheme was necessarily abandoned. This additional incident is of little importance, except that the correspondence connected with it proves the delusion under which Mr. Arnoweaver labors to be complete, whatever may be its cause, for he would have received the proffered confirmation seriously, and produced in support of the creations of his fancy a mass of proof that would have been equally baseless. It was to have passed in Savannah as excellent fun, though most people would be inclined to call it deliberate forgery.

CONGREGATIONALISM IN MASSACHUSETTS.—There are now 473 Calvinistic Congregational Churches in the State of Massachusetts, and only twenty six towns in the Commonwealth without a church of the order. The various churches have 350 pastors, and 60 stated supplies. There are 100 ministers reported without pastoral charge—making 560 clergymen in all. These churches have a male membership of 31,687; a female of 45,948—being an average of 142 to each church. There are 70,137 reported members of the Sabbath Schools, or an average of 147 to each school. The oldest four churches are the West Barnstable, gathered at Southwark, London, 1616; Tabernacle Church, Salem, Aug. 6, 1629; 1st Church, Lynn, 1632; South Marshfield, 1632. The largest four churches are the Park-street, Boston, 700; Mount Vernon Church, Boston, 656; 1st Church, Pittsfield, 605; John street, Lowell, 516. There are now seven pastors who have been settled over the respective churches during a period of from fifty to sixty years.

American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

SECOND DAY—AFTERNOON.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

Providence, R. I., Wednesday, Sept. 9, 1857.

The session for this afternoon was unusually short. The crowded state of the house at the hour of assembling, together with the lowering look of the weather, rendered the audience impatient. After an hour or more had been spent in addressing those homes were wisely taken into account, and an early motion of adjournment was moved and passed without dissent.

ABSTRACT OF THE ANNUAL REPORT.

The following is an abstract of the Annual Report presented to the Board by the Prudential Committee:

Twenty-eight missionary laborers have been sent to their several fields, in different parts of the world; seven of whom were returning to stations which they had before occupied. There are now under appointment in this country, eleven missionaries and seven female assistant missionaries; in all, eighteen.

The Morning Star was launched on the 12th of November, and sailed from Boston for Honolulu on the 2d day of December, where she arrived on the 24th of April following, from whence she sailed on her early and thoroughly tried. She was received, at the islands with demonstrations of joy, such as those islands never saw before. After one week in port, she sailed again with missionaries and delegates and supplies from the native churches, for the Marquesas Islands, some 1,500 miles distant. She was to return before two months, and sail with Mr. and Mrs. Bingham for Micronesia. By this time she is probably approaching the central regions of that section of the Pacific. She is commanded by the grandson of Hiram "who sitteth above the floods."

In the Gilbert Islands, Mr. Abner, a missionary, has ceased from his earthly labors. Preaching and schools have been established. Four or five natives at Tarawa, and as many more at Nonouanga, are believed to have been converted. One of these was awakened by witnessing the triumphant death of Mr. Abner.

The Zulu mission has made all the progress that is usual in enterprises of the same age among a barbarous people. Ten years ago there were no churches, and not more than one or two men, now eight churches contain nearly 300 members. In a nation of inveterate polygamists, a hundred married men now reside at the stations, each the husband of only one wife. In two-thirds of these families, both husband and wife are professors of religion. In 20 others, the husband is a church member. There are at least 80 households containing 100 baptized children, in which family religion is, to some extent, maintained. More than thirteen of these families have exchanged the reed hut for civilized dwellings. The power to read and write is beginning to gain ground, and the older stations show a decided advance towards civilization. The prospects of the mission have never looked quite so encouraging as now.

Dr. Kane continues to operate in Greece, but mainly through the press, having translated much of the more important parts of the literature of the Religious Tract Society into the modern Greek language.

The Armenian field continues to be cultivated with the most encouraging success, nor can our labors be longer assisted to the Armenians. In every branch of the work, and in nearly every part of the field, there has been progress. The Protestant community has increased in numbers, and is a consistent, intelligent, stable Christian community. There are the Musulman Turks, the Chaldean Christians, extensively and incessantly calling for the means of instruction in the gospel. More than twenty-two hundred Turkish Bibles have been sold the past year to the Turks, and gone doubtless into a still greater number of Turkish families. And in what other country of continental Europe should we find more toleration? The Hatti Scherif, however imperfectly enforced as yet, is still the law of the empire, the "Hatti Humayun" of Protestant liberty, promulgated doubtless in good faith; and there is now no prospects of any such persecution in Turkey as would have deterred the Apostles from attempting to execute their mission. In this field there are thirty-six missionaries, nearly a score of native preachers, and more than a hundred native helpers.

In Syria, we have been called to mourn the great loss occasioned by the death of Dr. Eli Smith, just when his labors in translating the Scriptures into the Arabic language had become most valuable. He has left the New Testament, the Committee are happy to be assured, in a condition to be upon printed under the supervision of Dr. Van Dyck.

The stations of the Assyrian mission are on the river Tigris, at Mosul and Diarbekir. Mosul has intense heat in the Summer, but even then it is the abode of but few diseases, and its climate, during three-fourths of the year, is said to be agreeable and very salubrious. The number of professed Christians at Diarbekir was doubled the past year, and is thirty-two.

THE MAHRATTA MISSIONS.

Bombay is the oldest missionary station of the Board. What is now wanted at Bombay are men of popular preaching talents, in full use of the language, and actively devoted to the oral proclamation of the Gospel. The Ahmednuggur field is ripening to harvest. The organizing of native churches in cities and villages, with native pastors, promises to answer all reasonable expectations. The mission has come to the conclusion that it is well to leave it for the Government to establish, if they will, vernacular schools in the villages, and English schools in the large towns. This will teach the people to read, and leave the mission more free for preaching.

The most southern of the four China missions—that of Canton—is virtually suspended by the war with England. Our [illegible] "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." They had heard of the fame of this new teacher. Not knowing, however, but that they by war reserved in his entertainment, for the Feast, they anxiously came to Philip. Philip was not the disciple to do anything about it—whether he could venture to introduce them to Jesus, and be confronted with Andrew. And presently they concluded to lay the case before the Master, whether they should have audience. What was the answer of Christ? "The hour is come that the Son of Man should be glorified." How was that? In what connection? "This feeting together of the Greeks to Him is the symbol of My Kingdom." How does he prophesy that Kingdom? "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it shall bring forth much fruit." "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." The coming of these Gentiles with the petition to know something of Jesus, was the signal that the hour had come for establishing the Kingdom peaceably upon earth, for all nations, by the sacrifice of himself. Only from his death could it come to the nations—only from his atoning sacrifice for the sins of the world—only from his redeeming blood—only from the sacrifice of himself, sown into the ground to die, could the kingdom spring up upon the earth, could men be drawn unto him; and therefore he must be glorified through death, leading to their life.

Now, as these Greeks came to us and say, "We have heard of the fame of your master; we have seen his work here in the field," "Sirs, we would see Jesus!" does there not come to us from that Throne where royal majesty and love divine sit combined in our Lord, the command that we heard last evening in this place, with the promise, "Go teach all nations; lo! I am with you!"

The question whether we will meet this case;—whether we will answer the demand of a people, manifesting sentiment, who are shouting at the door, and saying, "Give us the Gospel; we have a corrupted Christianity; we have had enough of it; give us pure Bible!" The question whether we will meet them demand, or simply the question, whether we have faithfully entered to Him who lifted up upon the Cross—whether the mode of each have felt his constraining love—whether their souls of course have been baptized with His redeeming blood—whether we are one with Him in sympathy and in His work;—so that we are ready to be cast into the ground and die, that others may partake of His life? Are we ready to answer that question? Shall we not answer it before we presume to come together again on the morrow, as a Missionary Board, to the table of our Lord? Shall we not put our hearts in such an attitude towards this call, as to regard it as the call of the Master? Shall we rise up and rejoice to respond to it? "Where are the means? Where are the men? That is a painful thought. While the cry comes up, "Give us help," the men are falling. Eli Smith has gone. Before his work, to human eye, is finished, David Brigham has gone—still in the flush of his youth. My close-mate! my brother! Very, very precious then was to me! And it is no sudden impulse of affection, stirred by these reports and scenes, that leads me to say, could I stand back twenty years ago I would go. Not hoping to give him a single, but to touch, as it were, the hem of that garment that swept the Mountain of fear as He went up to His glory!

Dr. Thompson's speech was uttered with great feeling, and made a deep impression upon the house.

Mr. Winner, of Ithaca, then made some remarks. He said that the audience might be moved to tears, as it had been, and yet go away and do nothing. He asked, in the language of the Westminster Catechism, "What is the chief end of man?" "To glorify God, and enjoy Him forever." He hoped that every person present might take to himself that question and answer, and ponder it and act upon it. The object of such a great multitude of people, coming together as they had come on this occasion, was to glorify God. He hoped they would not forget that high object.

Dr. Anderson, Senior Secretary of the Board, interrupted the speaker, to propound to him a question. "To send the Gospel to the Bulgarians," said the Secretary, "in such force as the field now demands, will cost $275,000. My question is, shall the Prudential Committee venture the enterprise at that cost?"

Dr. Winner—At twice that cost. [Applause.]

He knew of a missionary, he said, who earnestly prayed to God for the conversion of one soul. After a while, through his instrumentality, several were converted. The man then remarked that he was ashamed to think that he had not asked for more. The great difficulty with the Church is, that it does not ask for enough—it is satisfied with too little. The Church will not awake until individuals in it awake; and before individuals will do anything for any great work, they must be awake and alive to the importance of it. "God's promises are great," and if we could take hold of them with faith, "Giving to missions will enrich the givers." "He that watereth shall himself be watered." The Church has lost nothing by the money which has been given for foreign missions. It has made itself rich by this generosity. Christians are not sufficiently conscious of their individual influences. Churches are not sufficiently conscious of the influence of revivals of religion. One revival will multiply itself into many. The object of the Christian life on earth is to help on the cause of Christ's Kingdom. A man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things which he possesses. He besought the congregation "to go to work, as for their lives, for Christ."

Rev. Mr. Gleason, missionary among the Indians of the Oneida Reservation, in the State of New-York, made a brief speech in true Indian style. He expressed his sympathy for the missionary work, and made an earnest appeal for the means necessary to its continuance.

Rev. Mr. McLeod, of Philadelphia, said that he had read a call for men. Dr. Schauffler had called for men; Mr. Schneider had called for men; Dr. Thompson had called for men; Dr. Pomeroy had called for men; Dr. Winner had called for men; everybody, in fact, had called for men. But we are, said he, are "the men" to come from? Seminaries cannot make men. Colleges cannot make men. Where, then, must we go to find them? We must go to the Churches. Let each minister here present, he said, ask himself the question, "Have I got a man to represent my congregation in the foreign field?" Why, the Moravians, numbering 30,000 church-members, sent out thirty missionaries—a missionary to every 1,000 members. That's a model! What other denomination can show a similar example? He had heard that there was not, on the foreign field, a single missionary from the entire city of Boston! Each Church ought to be a Missionary Society, and its minister ought to consider himself the President of it. Let there be individual and personal effort. That's what is wanted.

Rev. Asa D. Smith, D. D., of New-York, referred to the pleasant associations which were called to his mind by the presence of so many missionaries who had been his companions in early life, either in College or in the Theological Seminary. "Schauffler," said he, "rises before me to utter his farewell discourse. I remember his theme—It has been thrilling this evening in my ears—'The pious heart happy in its suffering.' If these men could have been told, twenty-five years ago, that in a quarter of a century such results as are now made known to us would have been witnessed, they would not have believed it." Dr. Smith referred to Dr. Thompson's allusion to the electric cable, which had broken. He thought that the reason why that wire broke might be positively pondered by the Board. It snapped because they "stretched it out fast enough." (Laughter.) That's just the difficulty with the friends of missions—they don't "pay out fast enough."

The meeting adjourned till Monday, with singing part of Bishop Heber's "Missionary Hymn."

COMMITTEES ON MISSIONS.

The following are the Committees on Missions, appointed by the Chair:

Committee on Home Department—Dr. Wisner, Dr. Allen, Simeon Benjamin, Esq., Ambrose White, Esq., Dr. Bacon, Rev. C. N. Nichols, and Rev. Joel Mann.

On the African Missions—Dr. Bond, Dr. Dwight, Rev. W. Clark, Rev. J. F. Lamworthy, Rev. D. G. Sprague, Rev. Dr. Andrews, and D. B. Lincoln, Esq.

On the American and Greek Missions—Dr. Skinner, Dr. J. F. Stearns, E. Alden, M. D.; Rev. J. D. Butler, Rev. J. G. Bliss, Dr. Dickman, and Rev. S. B. Treat.

On the Syrian and Assyrian Missions—Dr. Dewitt, Rev. J. C. Holbrook, Rev. J. P. Fisher, Rev. S. Cook, Rev. I. McLeod, Rev. T. Williston, and Rev. H. D. Walker.

On the Armenian Missions—Rev. J. Malthy, Dr. Boutou, Dr. Blanchard, D. J. B. Wilson, Esq., Rev. S. W. Ward, Rev. E. J. Montague, and Hon. T. W. Williams.

On the Nestorian Missions—Dr. Squier, Prof. Barrows, Dr. J. O. Thompson, Dr. Wm. Clark, L. H. Delano, Esq., Dr. Blanchard, and Rev. J. R. Adams.

On the Mahratta Missions—Rev. J. E. Houghton, Dr. J. S. Clark, Dr. F. G. Cannon, Prof. E. A. Lawrence, Rev. Samuel Hutchins, Dr. Chickering and Rev. J. N. Sprague.

On the Teeloo Missions—Dr. Wm. Adams, Dr. Riddle, Dr. Dewitt, Rev. David Greene, Dr. Bardwell, Rev. G. Davis and Rev. D. T. Packard.

On the China Missions—Dr. Rowland, Dr. Sweetser, Rev. A. L. Stone, S. S. P. Gamage, LL. D., Dr. D. B. Coe, Dr. Peters and T. A. Taylor.

On the Sandwich Islands and Micronesia Missions—Chancellor Walworth, Gen. Williams, E. P. Waters, Esq., Dr. R. Armstrong, Rev. E. B. Beedle, Rev. S. Thurston and John Kingsbury, LL.D.

On North American Indians, No. 1—Dr. Todd, Rev. J. J. Bleisdell, D. A. Shepard, Esq., Rev. F. B. Gray, Rev. H. Beach, Rev. E. J. Boyd, J. W. Tappan, Esq.

On North American Indians, No. 2—Dr. Tappan, Dr. Calhoun, Rev. G. B. Hubbard, Rev. A. K. Strong, Rev. O. Eastman, Rev. A. S. Freeman and Rev. A. E. Clark.

THIRD DAY—MORNING SESSION.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Thursday, Sept. 10, 1857.

The Board assembled, as usual, at 9¼ o'clock this morning. The crowd does not diminish, but rather increases. Visitors come in with every train. A great number of clergymen, prominent in the Church, are present. Among the most distinguished guests are: Rev. Frederick Monod of Paris, brother of the late Rev. Adolphe Monod; Rev. Dr. Schauffler, a venerable Missionary from Constantinople; Rev. Mr. Schneider and Rev. Dr. Riggs, from the Turkish Missions; Rev. Dr. Thompson of Aintab; Rev. Dr. Armstrong from Honolulu; and the Hon. Edward G. Beckwith, President of Oahu College, Sandwich Islands. Among the prominent laymen are: Chief Justice Thomas A. Williams of Hartford; Chancellor Walworth, Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen, Hon. William J. Hubbard, of Boston; Judge William H. Jessup, of Pennsylvania; Gen. Williams of Norwich, Gen. Julius Pratt, Esq., of Boston; Dr. Pratt of Lebanon, Esq., of Johnsbury, Vt.; Pratt & Co., Chicago, Ill., of Roxbury, Mass.; Hon. Samuel Wilkey of Massachusetts. Among the clergymen are the Rev. Dr. Bacon of New-Haven; Rev. William T. Dwight, D.D., of Portland; Rev. Joseph P. Thompson, D.D., of New-York; Rev. Mark Hopkins, D.D., of Williamstown, Mass.; Rev. Henry M. Storrs of Cincinnati; Rev. Dr. Anderson of Roxbury, Mass.; Rev. Mr. Langworth, Secretary of the American Congregational Union, of New-York; Rev. William Hogarth of Brooklyn; Rev. Dr. Wisner of Ithaca, N. Y.; Rev. Dr. Allen of Massachusetts; Rev. Dr. Skinner of New-York City; Rev. Jonathan F. Stearns, D.D., of Newark, N. J.; Rev. J. McLeod of Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. Chickering of Portland; Rev. Jonathan Lewis, D.D., and Rev. Samuel Wolcott of Providence; Rev. A. Stone, D.D., of Boston; Rev. D. R. Cox, Secretary of the American Home Missionary Society; Rev. Dr. Absalom Peters of New-York; Rev. Dr. Todd of Pittsfield, Mass.; Rev. Thornton A. Wells, D.D., of New-Jersey; Rev. M. L. P. Thompson, D.D., of Buffalo; Rev. Asa D. Smith, D.D., of New-York; Rev. Dr. Joel Hawes of Hartford, and Rev. G. W. Hosmer, D.D., of Buffalo.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE REFORMED DUTCH CHURCH FROM COOPERATION WITH THE BOARD.

At the late meeting of the General Synod of the Reformed Dutch Church of the United States of America, that Church formally withdrew from the American Board, to carry on, in the future, its missionary operations through its own denominational agencies. Many members of that Church are present at this meeting of the Board, in order to testify their continued sympathy with its work on the missionary field. Chancellor Fraser, of the New-York University, after the presentation of a report by the Prudential Committee announcing the separation, made a formal expression of the unbabated interest of the Dutch Church in the labors and success of the Board.

A PERMANENT FUND FOR THE RELIEF OF MISSIONARIES.

A Report on the "Support of Disabled Missionaries and the Children of Missionaries" was presented by Prentiss Perry, Esq., of New-York. It was a long document, discussing the necessity of such a fund, concluding with the following resolutions:

1. That it is expedient to establish a Fund, to be called "The Fund for the Relief of Superannuated and Disabled Missionaries and the Children of Missionaries."

2. That the Fund be raised by direct contributions for this specific object, and such legacies as may be made to it; and that such measures be adopted in raising this Fund as shall least interfere with the regular receipts of the Board.

3. This Fund shall be invested in the name of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions; shall be applied exclusively to the objects herein specified; and a separate report of the receipts and disbursements shall be made at the Annual Meeting of the Board.

4. This Fund shall be invested solely in First Mortgages, or in Stocks of undoubted security.

5. That after the Fund shall amount to one hundred thousand dollars the interest or income shall be applied in the manner hereinafter named.

6. That in the distribution of the income of this Fund, it shall be appropriated,

(1.) To superannuated and disabled missionaries.

(2.) So much of the excess as may be necessary, shall be applied to the widows of missionaries, while they remain such; and to the orphan children of missionaries, who shall be entitled to aid beyond the allowance made to children whose parents are living; and the amount of such aid shall be regulated according to the circumstances of each case, by the Prudential Committee.

(3.) So much of the excess, after the aforementioned appropriations as may be necessary, shall be applied to other children of missionaries.

7. Each superannuated and disabled missionary who returns to this country, with the consent of his mission, and the approbation of the Board, shall be entitled to such annual allowance from this Fund, as may be determined, from time to time, by the Prudential Committee, subject to the approval of the Board.

8. That when the Board shall ratify the action of this Committee, the Fund shall be open for the reception of Legacies, and direct contributions for this specific object.

9. As far as this Fund shall be insufficient to provide for the various classes named herein,—it is understood that they will be provided for from the general fund as heretofore; and if, after meeting all the appropriations as above defined, there should be any surplus income reported at the end of the financial year, it may be either added to the capital of the Fund, or applied to the general expenditures, as the Board may direct.

The above report had its origin in the meeting of the Board in 1855, at Utica, when the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That a select Committee be appointed to consider the propriety and expediency of making some permanent provision for the support of superannuated and disabled missionaries, and also to inquire into the expediency of revising the present rules respecting the children of missionaries, and that the said Committee report at the next meeting of the Board.

A minority report on the same subject was presented, dissenting from the recommendations contained in the other, on the following grounds:

1. On the general ground, that the increase of the permanent funds of this Board was exceedingly undesirable.

2. There was no more need of a special fund for this purpose, than for the support of the missionaries while in actual service.

3. A special fund would increase the embarrassment of the Board in providing for such cases, by increasing the number and making it more difficult to discriminate.

4. The missionaries themselves have reason to oppose it. It would weaken the ties of interest, and the celing of obligation among relations to assist one another.

5. The number of disabled missionaries, and of children that need aid is so small, that there is no great practical difficulty in the way of providing for them, and there will not be if the number increases.

The reports, on a motion to adopt the former, elicited an animated discussion, for the space of twenty minutes, before the order of the day, for 10 o'clock, cut it off.

THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

The special topic of the morning was a consideration of the present state and the future prospects of the Sandwich Islands, as the basis of an appeal for aid in behalf of educational and missionary operations there.

Dr. Armstrong, for twenty-five years a missionary at the Sandwich Islands, made an address. He said that he had long desired to attend a meeting of the American Board.

For a long time he did not know how he could come home to the United States. He had not lost his health, and therefore did not need to take an ocean journey to regain it. He could not come simply for a pleasant visit to pleasant friends, for he could not afford to leave his work for such a purpose. At last a calling duty was sounded in his ear, and he came home obeying its call. He was almost afraid to let the audience know what that duty was, for fear that they might not be attracted toward it; for it was a duty for them as well a duty for him. He presented the claims of Oahu College, at Honolulu, upon the benefactions of Christians in this country. He said that that institution has now assumed an importance which it never had before. He traced the origin and progress of the College up to the present time, and pointed out the beneficent results which, to an unusual degree, have followed from its establishment in those Islands. When a charter for the College was applied for from the Government, not only a charter was given, but a generous donation of $10,000, provided $40,000 should be secured from other sources, especially when the Government, at the time, was paying 18 per cent. for money to carry on its own operations. He gave a favorable account of the character of the students of the College. He said that a Library is needed, and that two Professors are needed, but that the worst which is needed is money. If the money could be got, all the rest could be got—professors, library and all. He held up a subscription book in his hand, in which he had already received the names of several gentlemen who had subscribed $1,000 each. He shook it at the audience, and made a very humorous appeal for more contributions. That was the call of duty which brought him from the Sandwich Islands. That was his business.

He then adverted to the necessity of such a college in the Islands, in order to the education of the children of the missionaries who have been sent away from pleasant homes in this country to live out the rest of their lives, and when they die to leave their children there. He referred briefly to the progress of education there; and observing Dr. Wayland sitting on the platform near him, he said that Wayland's Moral Science had been a text-book there for twenty years. He said he was happy to meet the man who produced it. The Baptists, as well as the American Board, have thus some investment in those islands. [Laughter.]

He thought that it was time to begin to raise their own men, on their own soil, to do their future work for the Sandwich Islands. He thought they could be raised cheaper and better than they could be sent. Oahu College is in need of Missionary extension—to supply teachers, preachers, statesmen, educated men, to carry on a Christian civilization in those Islands.

President Beckwith, of Oahu College, son-in-law of Dr. Armstrong, spoke upon the same subject. He said that the audience had already seen that beggars are not modest. [Laughter.] He would, therefore, come right to the point, and say that what he wanted was money. The question of establishing a College in the Sandwich Islands, is not a question simply of the educating a few more or a few less young men. It is a greater question. It is a question of life or death to the institutions of Christianity and civilization, which at so great labor have been built up there. If freedom is to be perpetuated there, so the people must be developed. Their own resources must be made a good use of. No nation can long live by subsisting on another. It must have vital strength of its own. Christianity has already been introduced into those Islands. Education should now be made to follow. It will be cheaper for the American Churches instead of keeping the Islands dependent for their growth upon the charities of a foreign nation to help them in beginning to take care of themselves in future. If he were speaking before a Board of Commerce, he would speak of the commercial importance of these Islands, but he would not enlarge upon the subject further than to say that commercial men, who know the importance of the Sandwich Islands, would not allow them to relapse in any degree into their former condition. He concluded with a strong and eloquent appeal for aid.

RESOLUTIONS ON SEPARATION FROM THE REFORMED DUTCH CHURCH.

The Committee to whom the matter of a separation of the Reformed Dutch Church of the United States was referred, presented the following report:

Resolved, That in accordance with the proposal received from the General Synod of the Reformed Dutch Church, the Board agree to a dissolution of the compact for the prosecution of Foreign Missions, which was formed with that Synod in the year 1832.

Resolved, That the appointment of a missionary being a personal matter, involving a mutual contract and obligation between the missionary and the Board, therefore, the Missionaries of the Amoy and Arcot Missions, formed and now proceeded on the basis of this compact, request a release from their connection with the Board, the Prudential Committee is instructed to grant such a release, and also to transfer the property in those missions to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Dutch Church.

Resolved, That all financial questions growing out of this business be referred for mutual adjustment to the Prudential Committee and the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Dutch Church.

Resolved, That in assenting to a dissolution of this compact, now of twenty-five years' duration, the Board gratefully acknowledge the expressions of respect, esteem and confidence, which are embodied in the resolutions of the General Synod; and it would be but testimony to the Christian kindness and urbanity which have uniformly and eminently characterized the pastors and members of that Church, and especially the officers of its Board of Foreign Missions, in their intercourse with the officers and agents of this Board; and would give assurance of our earnest love and prayer that the results of the step now taken may equal the highest expectations of the Reformed Dutch Church in the promotion of the Redeemer's kingdom.

After the presentation of the above report, Chancellor Fraser again briefly expressed his warm feelings of attachment to the Board.

Rev. Dr. Taylor, (Reformed Dutch,) of Newark, N. J., also made some remarks. He said that the separation was not a division,—and that it arose not out of disagreements or diversities of opinion, but out of a deliberate conviction that the Reformed Dutch Church could, for the future, carry on its missionary operations to greater advantage through its own agencies.

Dr. Dewitt, of New-York, made a few closing remarks in the same strain. He also gave some account of the rise and progress of the Dutch Church, in which he said that the Church formed in the Mayflower was the first that was planted in America, and that the Dutch Church at New-York was the next.

The Board then adjourned for the morning Session.

In the afternoon the Communion of the Lord's Supper was celebrated in two churches. The scene, in both, was of great interest and solemnity. To-morrow morning it is likely that a motion of final adjournment will be made.

[BY TELEGRAPH.

PROVIDENCE, Friday, Sept. 11.

The Board met again at 8 o'clock this morning, and disposed of the reports of the Committees to whom the various portions of the annual report had been referred.

Hon. S. H. Walley reported a resolution expressing the regret of the Board on parting with its late President and Vice-President, and its high sense of their worth, and wishing for them a long life of happiness and continued usefulness.

Very affecting parting addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Jessup, of the Syrian, and Dr. Schneider, of the Armenian Missions. The latter presented the thanks of a church and congregation of 3,000 persons at Aintab, in Asia Minor, for the Gospel sent them by this Board. He held up their letter in the Turkish language.

Rev. Dr. Woods, in behalf of the Board, expressed thanks to the citizens of Providence for their kind hospitalities, and Rev. Mr. Clapp, of Providence, responded in a most eloquent and touching address, which brought tears to all eyes.

The Doxology was then sung in long metre, and the Board adjourned to meet next year at Detroit.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

TO TEACHERS AND LITERARY MEN:
THE EDUCATIONAL WORLD

LITERARY MONTHLY, ILLUSTRATED.

The unprecedented success during the past year has enabled the publisher of this Monthly Journal of 32 pages, royal quarto, devoted to Education, Literature, Science and Art, designed to be a permanent, first-class Periodical, exhibiting the highest literary and educational talent of the country, which the interest and importance of the subject, of the most liberal and popular character, and the low price (only $1 50 per annum), can attract. It will include the whole circle of topics appertaining to Education, practical and theoretical, with incidental considerations of Literature, Science, and the interests of the Household, treating them with a direct, earnest purpose, to enlarge the views, elevate the principle, purify the taste, quicken the interest and facilitate the labors of those engaged in the instruction of the young.

GENERAL CONTENTS:

Articles on Educational topics—as, The best methods and latest theories of Instruction—The proper subjects and just habits of education—The proportion that should be and relative order of different studies—Female Education—Physical Education—Moral Culture—Self Education—Amusements, &c.; Biographical Sketches of Teachers, with finely engraved portraits; Sketches of Educational and Literary Institutions, with views and structural Construction of School-Houses, with original designs; Educational Intelligence, including the progress of legislation and endowment, the election of school officers, or other School Meetings, Commencements of colleges, or other Institutions, Proceedings of Teachers' Institutes throughout the Union, &c. Reviews on Literary Works; Literary Intelligence; complete Lists of new Books; American, English and Continental Reviews of Choice Books; and a variety of Miscellaneous Articles; Contents of leading Reviews, &c. Summary of Scientific Discovery, Invention and Improvement; Interesting Articles for general reading, instruction, and amusement, for the entertainment of the social circle, or family circle; Music and Musical Essays and Intelligence, &c.

The services of a most experienced and able Editor, and the co-operation of a large number of distinguished and competent authors and teachers have been secured, the list of which will be increased till the public confidence in the proposed Journal shall rest upon the broadest union of talent, experience and practical ability.

FIRST CONTRIBUTORS.

The first, or immediately succeeding number, will contain articles from the pens of Rev. Horace Mann, Prof. Lewis Upson, of College Hill, Ohio, Amherst, of Marietta College; David A. Wells, editor of American Scientific Discovery; Hon. C. H. Wiley, Supt. Public Instruction of North Carolina; Prof. Huntington, Harvard University; Dr. W. A. Alcott, Boston; Prof. Webster, Virginia; Hon. V. M. Rice, late Supt. Public Instruction, State of New-York; Hon. W. H. Wells, Supt. Public Instruction, Chicago, and late Principal Normal School, Mass.; Hon. S. Kneeland, Supt. Public Instruction, New-York City; Prof. C. S. Henry, late of University of New-York; J. N. McElligott, LL.D.; Pres. Hitchcock, Amherst College. In music, Prof. Wm. B. Bradbury, New-York; and in the Ladies' Column, Miss Emerson Coxsun, and others, etc., etc.

CONTENTS OF THE FIRST NUMBER.

Among the first articles will be the following: Biographical Sketch and Historic Estimate of Dr. Nott, of Union College, accompanied with a portrait. Outline of the Life and Educational Services of Horace Mann, with a portrait. Dignity and Impact of the Teacher's Office—its relation to the Learned Professions and the Public Welfare. The just Relative Proportions of Classic, Mathematical, and Scientific Studies. The proper Scope and Characteristics of an Educational Journal. Physical Education, illustrated by drawings of healthful and attractive sports and cheaply attainable gymnastic exercises, for school and home. Libraries of our country—commencing with a notice of the Astor Library, with a view of the completed edifice. American Observatories, with finely engraved views. Public Amusements, their utility, limits and proper character, including a review of popular existing entertainments. Reminiscences of Fenimore Cooper, Personal and Literary, with new incidents and anecdotes. Recreations for Ladies, with calisthenic illustrations, &c.

Copious ILLUSTRATIONS of classic designs in Art, views of public edifices, portraits of eminent men, &c., &c., engraved in the best style of the art form an important feature. The arrangements for European contributions and illustrations will be completed in a few weeks.

CIRCULATION.

THE EDUCATIONAL WORLD will commence with a circulation of 10,000 copies, which arrangements are in progress for rapidly increasing, it is hoped, to 100,000, and thus reaching, perhaps, half a million of readers.

TO EDUCATORS, SCHOOL OFFICERS AND LITERARY MEN interested in the Cause of Education, it is believed the proposed Journal will furnish such a medium of intelligence and suggestion as may secure their confidence and patronage.

The few columns of

will be strictly limited to books, (chiefly educational,) Periodicals, Literary Institutions, Philosophical and Educational Apparatus and Furniture, Music and Musical Instruments, Engravings and Works of Art, and other matters of special interest to the Teachers, Clergymen, Students and Literary Men. It will be readily seen that these pages will offer an unequaled medium for advertising in this department, the Publishers' list of Teachers, Literary Institutions, etc., being the result of years of discriminating and expensive labor, corrected to the present time, and outnumbering the subscribers to all the Educational Journals in the Union combined.

FIFTY CENTS A YEAR is only the prime cost of producing and circulating this Journal, and the profit, if any, will arise from the advertisements just named.

The date of the first number, a further list of distinguished contributors, and other particulars, will be duly announced. A full Prospectus will be sent on application.

SANDERS' SCHOOL SPEAKER

Offers to Teachers and Schools, the most copious, adapted and spirited collection for Declamation, now before the public. Though recently published, it has received the most cordial commendations from the Press—a few of which follow:

The Educational Herald says: "The pieces of this handsome volume are short, numerous, varied, spirited, and unhackneyed, embracing brilliant periods and stirring sentiments well fitted for fervid utterance."

The Home Journal says: "It is a remarkably available book."

The Boston Post says: "It is something more and better than a collection of eloquent extracts or literary gems; it steadily keeps in view the training of pupils in oratory; and its selections are skillfully adapted to the purpose."

The Boston Journal says: "The pieces are animated with stirring thought or impassioned feeling and bring into practice those principles of rhetorical delivery, vocal modulation, gesture and manner, which are necessary to form the effective speaker."

The New-York Evangelist says: "It has fewer feeble or inept passages, or uninteresting topics than can generally be found."

The Chicago Democrat says: "It is the most complete book of its kind we have ever seen, and should be in all the schools, academies, and debating clubs."

The New-York Observer recommends it as "displaying a degree of care and intelligent study not often given to compilations of this kind."

The Utica Daily Observer calls it "the most comprehensive of its kind that has ever fallen under our notice."

The Rural New Yorker characterizes it as "a complete and thorough work."

The Rochester Democrat says: "The well-known author of the School Reader has compiled one of the best books on elocution that has been published."

The Rochester Union calls it "the most complete book of the kind we have ever seen."

It is illustrated by a fine steel portrait of Webster addressing the Senate.

Single copies sent prepaid to Teachers for examination on receipt of the price, $1.

Descriptive catalogue of the "American Educational Series" (of which it forms part) sent gratis, on application.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The second day's proceedings of the Democratic State Convention at Syracuse, contrary to expectation, opened quite harmoniously. A caucus of the New-York Delegation had been held in the morning, in which a list had been agreed upon, to be presented to the Convention, consisting of eight from the County and eight from the Willson Small Democracy, the proportions being assigned by the chairman. There for the purpose of the Convention, a compromise was effected which allowed the business to go on smoothly. The list of Vice-Presidents was then completed, and the State Committee and the Committee on Resolutions were announced. The names will be found in our report of the proceedings. The Convention then proceeded to the nomination of the State Ticket, which we give as telegraphed to us:

For Secretary of State—GIDEON J. TUCKER, of New-York.

For Comptroller—SANFORD E. CHURCH, of Orleans.

For State Treasurer—ISAAC S. VANDERPOOL, of Buffalo.

For Attorney-General—LYMAN TRUMBULL, of Albany.

For Canal Commissioner—VAN R. RICHMOND, of Wayne.

For State Prison Inspector—WILLIAM C. RUGGLES, of Hudson.

For Judge of the Court of Appeals—Judge DENIO, the present incumbent.

During the proceedings an edifying encounter of words took place between Mayor WOOD and DANIEL E. SICKLES, in which it was evident there was no love lost on either side. On reassembling for the afternoon session, another attempt to settle the New-York difficulties by resolution was made, but the resolution was promptly tabled. Judge DENIO was renominated for the Court of Appeals, after the display of considerable feeling, and speeches by several prominent members of the Convention.

The Europa's mails reached this City last evening, and we publish, elsewhere, some interesting details of European and Indian news. The latter is the more important. Though the Indian mail arrived in London at too late an hour on Saturday, the 29th ult., to be sent out by the Europa, we have, nevertheless, full telegraphic particulars from Vienna and Alexandria of the bloody massacre at Cawnpore, as well as the enlightened comments thereon by the leading London journals. According to all accounts, the position of the British troops before Delhi is very discouraging. Large numbers have been compelled to leave to protect other districts, and the besieging force has as much, and more than it can perform, in repelling the determined sorties made by the enemy. If it be true, as reported, that the army of Oude, 60,000 strong, has put itself in communication with the insurgents of Delhi, we do not see how the British, which only number 2,000 all told, can possibly avoid retiring until large reinforcements shall have arrived. It will require at least 7,000 men to carry the city by assault, and that number cannot reach there before next Christmas.

The European intelligence appears tame after the Indian news. The quarrel between Naples and Sardinia, the settlement of the Moldavian question, and the Anglo-French Mediation in the Spanish-Mexican dispute, are the principal political topics of the day. It seems quite certain that the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company have postponed until next year the laying of the sub-marine cable. In all probability the cable will be bought by the British Government for the new enterprise of establishing a telegraphic communication with India. When completed, Calcutta will be within a week's speaking distance of London.

We receive very late news from Utah, with dates to Aug. 13, by the arrival in this City of Elders SAMUEL W. RICHARDS and GEORGE Q. CANNON, direct from Salt Lake, on their way to fulfill a mission in England. The Mormons were in a hopeful condition, not at all dismayed, and in a state of profound wonder as to the purpose of the Government in sending troops against them. The harvest has been extraordinarily plentiful this season. Work was progressing on the new Temple. Business was reviving. Elder RICHARDS reports having passed on the Plains a Mormon immigration of 4,000 persons on their way to Utah. All were in good condition, and the hand-carts were in high favor.

Latest advices from the City of Mexico state that the Mexican Government have settled the Tehuantepec question, by annulling both the Garey and the Slidell grants.

A Committee appointed by the Grasshopper Falls Convention, in Kansas, has prepared and issued an address to the people of the United States, in which a history of the troubles in Kansas is given, and the present attitude of affairs in the Territory is discussed. The document contains a special address addressed to the people of Missouri, warning them not to attempt another invasion, and concludes by exhorting the Free-State men of Kansas to vote at the coming election, in pursuance of the action of the Convention.

A meeting was held at No. 168 Bowery, last evening, to form a Central Democratic Club. A large number were in attendance, and Delegates from nearly all the Wards gave in their names as members of the new organization. They propose to call home from the control of leaders and cliques, and invite the cooperation of the Democrats without distinction of past differences. THOMAS A. JOYCE was Chairman, and A. J. PLUMB, Secretary. The meeting was most distinguished for strong manifestations of Democracy, and was very orderly, except on one occasion, when two persons rose and addressed the Chair at the same instant. The nomination of GIDEON J. TUCKER was hailed with enthusiasm.

A new Court House for the County of Westchester has been erected at White Plains. The Supreme Court, Judge STRONG presiding, held its first session there on Thursday afternoon. Prior to the opening of the Court a meeting was held in the commodious Court room of the building. Speeches were made by Judge STRONG, WM. CURTIS NOYES and others. The building is pronounced one of the best of the kind in the State. When are we to have our new City Hall?

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, the only case of interest was that of JOHN W. MACALPINE, alias Lieut.-Col. MAXMADUKE REEVES, charged with inciting a woman named BOLAND to commit perjury, by swearing that she saw a trunk containing over $9,000 worth of goods, money, &c. lost overboard at Punta Arenas, through the carelessness of the Accessory Transit Company. As the woman could not be brought to testify against him, having been tampered with by some party or other, the case did not proceed, but the District Attorney had the defendant recommitted, on the charge of obtaining $200 from Mr. GARVEY, of Brooklyn, by falsely representing himself to be a Lieutenant-Colonel in the British army, sent over here by the British Government to purchase an enormous quantity of patent fire-arms.

The further hearing of the case of LAWLER, for the St. Nicholas Hotel defalcation, was postponed yesterday till this afternoon, at 1 o'clock, owing to the indisposition of Mr. HARRINGTON, one of the counsel engaged.

The Commissioners of Excise met on Friday, when licenses were granted to the following individuals: JAMES B. SMITH, No. 215 Eighth-avenue, storekeeper; MICHAEL MCLOUGHLY, One Hundred and Eleventh-street, Third-avenue, Innkeeper. The Commissioners then adjourned.

On Monday the anniversary of the capture of Mexico will be celebrated by the military, and it is said the Gold Box will be presented to Lieut. Col. DUCHMAN. The Scott Legion are expected from Philadelphia.

Last evening, about 10 o'clock, Officer CARR, of the Sixth Ward, having received orders to keep the corners of the street clear, attempted to drive away a gang of "Band Rabbits" from the corner of Mott and Canal streets. He was insulted and on attempting to arrest one of them, his prisoner was taken from him. He then went towards the station-house and met Officer SPEAR, and on going back and looking into a rum hole at the corner of Baxter and Canal streets, saw the man who had been arrested leading a pistol. They rushed in and took the pistol from him. In doing so they were set upon and insulted in a most serious manner. A few of the Fourteenth Ward police, in assisting them, were also beaten. Officer SHEARES, of that Ward, was cut in the head with a weapon and seriously injured. Capt. HICKS dispatched a number of men to the scene of the affray, but they found all quiet again. The captured pistol is a single barreled one, and heavily loaded. As the fellow who owned it is well known, he will probably be arrested to-day.

The two Williamsburg ferry boats, the Oneiaka, of the South Seventh-street and Peck Slip line, and the George Law, of the James Slip and South Tenth-street line, came into collision yesterday morning, midway up the stream, opposite Jackson-street wharf, and the Oneiaka was seriously damaged; some 400 passengers were on board of the latter boat, and a large collection of vehicles, and the collision came near resulting in serious loss of life. As usual in all such cases, each charges the other with the blame of the accident, and the passengers generally take the side of the boat they were on.

A special meeting of the Teachers' Association was held at their rooms last evening, at which Mr. THOMAS FOULKE presided, and resolutions of respect and condolence were passed in honor of the late WASHINGTON M. SMITH. Messrs. Dunshee, McNary, Martin, Smith, and D. B. Scott were appointed a Committee on Resolutions by the President. The Committee reported the resolutions, which, after brief remarks by Messrs. Scott, Fanning, Dunshee, Stuart, McNary and Smith, were unanimously adopted, when the Association adjourned.

The officers of the Second Precinct arrested twelve girls last evening, for strolling in the City Hall Park.

The Directors of the American Institute will open their Twenty-ninth Annual Exhibition on Tuesday next. Steam has already been raised from the new boilers, and it is expected that the working machinery will be run from the commencement. It is desired that exhibitors should secure their space by arranging their articles without delay.

JAMES E. BROWN, a minor, residing in Brooklyn, was taken in custody yesterday, charged with having, by false pretences, defrauded Mr. JOHN GIBBS, a machinist in First-avenue, out of $2,190, by giving him in payment for six machines certain notes, which, when they became due, were protested, and yet remain unpaid. He was held to answer in the sum of $2,000.

An unknown woman, about 22 years of age, flung herself into the East River the other day and was drowned. The body was recovered yesterday, and Coroner HILLS held an inquest upon it. Verdict: "Suicide by drowning." Deceased was recognized as a person who called a few days since, at a house in Lewis-street, and applied for work, stating that she had just arrived from New-Haven, and was totally destitute.

An inquest upon the body of MICHAEL HICKEY, a Custom-House officer, who came to his death from stabs received at a political meeting on the night of the 2d inst. in the Seventeenth Ward, was resumed yesterday, and will be continued to-day.

An investigation into the cause of the death of MR. MARY MURDELL, who came to her death from violence a few days since, is now pending before Coroner CONNERY. She is supposed to have been murdered by her husband, JACOB, who is in custody.

Coroner CONNERY held an inquest yesterday upon the body of WM. CALLAGHAN, a child of five years, who was some days ago thrown into the water and drowned by a woman named ANN MURPHY, who had twice before attempted to drown the child, but was prevented by persons who were passing. The evidence adduced by the jury was "that the deceased came to his death by being thrown into the dock at the foot of Oliver-street, by ANN MURPHY, and we believe from the testimony presented to us that no one else could have done it." The accused was locked up, and certain facts elicited in the evidence led to the arrest of WILLIAM CALLAGHAN for bigamy.

An inquest was held yesterday at the New-York Hospital, on the body Mrs. JULIA COFFEE, a native of Ireland, 35 years of age. The verdict rendered was, "Death by suicide, from taking opium and arsenic; the act, in the Jury's opinion arising from fear of maltreatment from her husband and grief at the loss of her children." Mrs. COFFEE resided at No. 8 Pearl-street, and was a sober and industrious woman. She leaves an infant only four weeks old.

The Young Men's Republican Committee met last evening, but did not do much business. A Committee reported some severe resolutions in regard to Mr. DRAPER's resignation from the Police Board, which were adopted by a vote of 22 to 7.

The News From India.

The latest news from India does not materially change the dismal aspect of affairs for the British, the success of the faithful native troops at Cawnpore being the only favorable gleam of intelligence from that quarter.

It is now nearly three months since the rebellion assumed a formidable shape, and yet, up to the last accounts, the English have been unsuccessful in every attempt to arrest it. They have more than unsuccessful. They have been been overwhelmed with disaster. Besieged at Lucknow, defeated with heavy losses at Agra, cut to pieces by the insurgents at Cawnpore, decimated by the cholera at Delhi, the torch of insurrection lighted north of them at Sealcote, and south of them at Hyderabad, and the whole interior adjacent to the Jumna and the Ganges infested by an infuriated enemy—their situation seems for the present to be hopeless, and their condition that of suitors for peace rather than dictators of war.

India cannot be reconquered in "six or eight months," nor at a cost of £10,000,000 sterling only, as was boasted at first; and the English people, notwithstanding their general ignorance of Indian affairs, are already apprehending this fact. Assuming, as we are bound to do, that the English must eventually succeed in this struggle—either by exterminating the Mahommedans, or compromising with them in a treaty of peace—it is safe to say that many years must elapse before their success will be complete, and their dominion firmly re-established. And the cost of success will be immense. A greater part of the revenue in the Bengal Presidency—including the North-west provinces, Oude, and the Punjab—and which comprises two-thirds of the entire revenue of India, will be lost for several successive years. To this must be added the vast expense of transporting from England and maintaining in India for several years to come, a force of 50,000 English troops—the amount of Government treasure, stolen in every city and cantonment which the rebels have sacked—the value of Government property destroyed, in the shape of produce, buildings, and public works—the great loss arising from the neglect of agriculture, and the general suspension of all industrial and commercial enterprises.

All these, in the aggregate, represent a sum which the English people have not yet dreamed of in their confused calculations; a sum which, before they are again the acknowledged masters of Bengal, must run up to one hundred and fifty millions and more. But the prize at stake is worth it. And loyal John Bull will feel a surly pride as, year after year, for many years to come, the orator of the India Budget shall ask him to put his hand once more deep into his pocket, and pay out another score for the reconquest of India. But had this India Budget interested him in years past, as much as it must interest him in years to come, he would have saved the money and the disgrace which this struggle for "our Indian Empire" will now cost him.

Morality of the Race-Course.

The defeat of Mr. TEN BROECK's horses in England, besides creating ten times as much fuss as the whole affair was worth, has led many people to repeat with greater emphasis than ever the old question: Has the practice of racing any really useful effect upon the breed of horses? There are many who unhesitatingly reply in the negative, and support their position by the allegation that great speed, which alone the race-course is intended to develop, is not that quality in the horse which is, in this age of the world, most needed—that rapid movement from point to point, either for business or pleasure, is now effected in a much higher degree, and at a much cheaper rate, by railroads, than ever it was by coach or courier, and that, therefore, we now require power in draught, not speed in traveling.

This view of the matter is, in our eyes, founded altogether on a mistaken notion of the real standard of excellence established by racing, and the real object of the care and pains bestowed in training for the course. The precautions taken in breeding and training racers do no doubt produce speed, but they produce strength and bottom, and good points generally, just as well. Moreover, they give the offspring of mares and stallions, which have been remarkable either for strength of limb, or length of wind, a peculiar value, and make their preservation and perpetuation an object of the deepest interest to a large body of men who, if there were no such thing as horse racing, could not be got to bestow upon it half the attention, or any attention at all. The qualities which give a horse speed, are first and foremost a highly sensitive nervous organization—in other words, that courage, and endurance, and eagerness, which we should call morale in a man and mettle in a steed; but besides this, length of wind, strength of bone and sinew are just as necessary to a racer as to a cart-horse. Horse-breeding may be carried on as cattle-breeding is, by attention to points only, but it is hardly necessary to say that any breed of horses propagated on this principle would soon cease to be worth anything. Above or beyond symmetry of form, the horse-breeder has to look for qualities which are not always visible to the eye, and which are only revealed on trial. Racing reveals them in a more notorious and decided manner than any other test can do, and calls the attention of the public to the fact that, according to all known laws of hereditary transmission of physical and moral characteristics, the progeny of a certain horse is likely to excel in certain directions. The famous Eclipse, the fastest horse that was run on the American turf, as far, at least, as we have any means of knowing, was not by any means such a horse in external conformation as would carry off the prize at a "show." Many of his points were bad; many to be sure were extraordinarily good, but no "judge" would, in all likelihood, have felt justified in awarding him a prize. Yet on the course, with a jockey on his back, he displayed every quality which is most valuable in a horse, in a very high degree.

It is said that the training for the race course is solely directed to fitting the animal to put forth all his powers for a short time and for a short effort. This is true up to a certain point. The final touches of the trainer's art are no doubt devoted to this end; but the whole system has decidedly the effect of qualifying the horse to run long as well as ran fast. It deprives him of superfluous flesh, hardens his muscles, or in other words, strengthens them by regular and severe exercise, or rigid diet. This is just what should be done to qualify a horse for dragging a buggy fifty miles. That the race-course has not a tendency to unfit horses for protracted effort is fully proved by the history of the English hunter—a horse of the same breed as the racer, except that care is taken to give him more weight. No horse in the world has his powers more severely tested. No other horse in the world has as yet shown himself capable of carrying 200 pounds across hedge and ditch for fifteen or twenty miles with perfect safety to wind and limb.

We venture to assert, however, that since the invention of railroads horses' speed in both saddle and harness has become a matter of greater importance than ever, both here and in Europe, first, because travel is now concentrated on great straight lines, with stopping-places only on certain spots, which have to be reached from all sides and all distances; and secondly, because railways make punctuality imperative and have rendered time more valuable. We shall begin to talk of all horses having lost value except cart-horses, when locomotives begin to traverse the highroads, when every wealthy family keeps its own engine and its own engine-driver and stoker, but not sooner. It cannot be denied that the race-course attracts gamblers, but we doubt whether it begets gambling. There is always amongst a certain class a certain amount of craving for artificial excitement and for sudden gains, which must have an outlet. It chooses race-horses as the nearest thing at hand. If there were no races it would soon find something else. Chance is not confined to trials of speed between horses. Gambling is, par excellence, not the vice of England or America, but of Russia, Poland and Southern Europe, where horse-racing is all but unknown. To put an end to gambling we must stop it at its source, but giving people better tastes and healthier desires. Abolishing race-courses with the view of putting a stop to betting is very like taking away brandy from the drunkard and leaving him whisky.

Law Ashore and Afloat.

Yesterday morning a collision took place, or rather was effected between the Peck Slip ferry-boat Oneiaka and the George Law, a rival boat, belonging to a company known as the South Tenth-street Ferry Company.

The larboard side of the Oneiaka was stove in, and the deck considerably damaged. As there were 400 passengers on board the injured boat, and not a few horses and vehicles, the confusion that followed the crash was slightly exciting to those in the immediate vicinity, though it would seem to have been contemplated with great serenity by the individuals in charge of the other vessel. Fortunately no casualties occurred, and the battered ferry-boat landed her passengers in safety.

The probability of just such a disaster as this was pointed out in the TIMES more than three weeks ago, and since we called public notice to the perilous proceedings going on at this particular ferry, ample opportunity for the verification of our statement, and for the correction of the mischief, has been afforded the officers of both companies plying on these waters.

Of all which we now behold the result, and have only to call the people together and thank Heaven that things are no worse. To bestow any sort of indignation upon the conduct of anybody concerned would be simply to waste our words and our good temper. When the lives of foot passengers in Broadway are daily endangered by the frantic driving of omnibuses and carriages—when the law of the sidewalks is a dead letter and the disorder thereof a lively reality—when our comings and goings on the land are a mere matter of fatalistic faith in Fortune or of apathetic reliance upon Providence, it really does not seem worth while for us to dwell upon the outrageous disregard of the public safety and of the rights of passengers which in one form or another prevails at almost all the ferries of this City, and makes approach to New-York or exit from it as interestingly uncertain as the attempt to enter or leave a beleagured fortress.

Nobody has so much as taken the trouble to ascertain, we believe, whether there was or was not any adequate provision of life-boats and safety-buoys made on board of the boat injured in this instance. Had three hundred out of the four hundred people who were crowded together on her decks been precipitated into the East River and carried out to sea, probably something might have been said on this subject.

As it is, it really is quite useless for the public press to do more than call the attention of our citizens afresh to the fact that by their own election, manifested in the form of a supine indifference to the affairs of the City in which they live, and move and have their being on a volcano, a quaking-moss, a quicksand.

They laugh over the squabbles of Tammany Hall—they are amused by the eccentricities of drunken or incompetent officials—they shrug their shoulders at the bare notion of a primary meeting, and regard reform by the ballot as the best of possible jokes.

Let them not, therefore, complain at the impotence of the Law to protect their interests, their limbs and their lives, on the Highway of the East River or the pavements of the City streets.

THE MAN WHO BROKE THE TELEGRAPHIC CABLE.—The letter of Professor MORSE, which we published, gives a perfectly clear and understandable explanation of the cause of the breaking of the Atlantic telegraphic cable, and fixes the blame of the disaster where it properly belongs. Mr. BRIGHT, the head engineer, who had the laying of the cable under his sole direction, appears to have been the culprit. He had put the blame upon "a mechanic," but Professor MORSE says that he ordered one of his subordinates to apply the brakes, the "mechanic" hesitated, Mr. BRIGHT repeated the fatal order, and the mischief was done. The Professor sarcastically remarks that Mr. BRIGHT "generously" gave a certificate exonerating all persons on board the ship from any blame for the disaster. Another very important fact stated by Professor MORSE, is that the cable was running out but very little faster than the rate at which the ship was going.

A MUNCHAUSENISM FINALLY DISPOSED OF.—The great Arrowsmith hoax, published more than a year ago by the London Times, and never fairly denied by that paper, has at last been completely wiped out as with a sponge by the Times' special correspondent, who went to the actual scene of the reported occurrence to discover what truth there might have been in it. He found it to have been a pure hoax, the simple-minded Arrowsmith was awfully sold, by some waggish travelers, and the great Times was sold by Arrowsmith. But the whole absurdity has now got its quietus.

ENCOURAGING TO SPECULATORS WHO BRING LIBEL SUITS AGAINST NEWSPAPER EDITORS.—In the suit of MUNSON J. LOCKWOOD against the Editor of the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES for a libel alleged to have been published in the letter of a correspondent some three years since, a verdict was rendered yesterday, at White Plains, in Westchester County, in favor of the plaintiff of six cents damages.

QUARANTINE MATTERS.—The steamship Illinois was yesterday discharged from Quarantine, and she came up last evening, and went to Hunter's Point to go upon the ways for repair. She has been perfectly freed from all impurities, and is pronounced by the Health Officer perfectly free from infection. She had no cargo on board in which disease could find lodgment, and propagate itself—none of the sixty persons constituting the crew have been taken sick. The bark Benson arrived yesterday in 15 days from Havana, bringing 32 passengers, several of them being those left at Havana by the Illinois. She lost two of her crew by yellow fever upon her first arrival in Havana, but has had no sickness or death on board since. The passengers were landed at Quarantine, and the vessel sent to the lower anchorage. The bark Victoria, from St. Jago de Cuba, was reported to stop and discharge, which the Captain preferred to a 15 days Quarantine.

Meeting of the Young Men' Republican Committee — Resolutions Concerning Simeon Draper.

A regular meeting of the Young Men' Republican Committee was held, last evening, at their rooms, No. 629 Broadway, JAMES CURTISS, Jr., in the Chair. After the transaction of routine business, the Committee to whom were referred the resolutions in regard to SIMEON DRAPER, reported the following preamble and resolutions:

WHEREAS, SIMEON DRAPER by resigning his position as a member of the Police Commission has placed it in the power of FERNANDO WOOD, a desperate political gambler and an unscrupulous opponent of the Metropolitan Police Law, to thwart the efforts of the other Commissioners and prevent for the present at least, any further steps towards the appointment of an efficient and unpartisan Police, and

WHEREAS, These results are no more than the natural and legitimate consequences of said resignation, and such as might have been naturally expected to flow therefrom, therefore,

Resolved, That SIMEON DRAPER, by the course he has pursued has inflicted serious injury on the cause of order and good government, has grievously disappointed all friends of the Metropolitan Police, and has proved himself unfit to receive, at the hands of Republicans, any position of political trust or responsibility.

Resolved, That our thanks are eminently due to MESSRS. BOSS, SPRANAHAN and BOWEN, for the decided stand taken by them in opposition to those schemes of their opponents to which they have been exposed by the action of their associate SIMEON DRAPER.

Resolved, That a copy of this Preamble and these Resolutions, signed by the President and Secretary, be forwarded to each member of the Metropolitan Police Commission.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CHARLES T. RODGERS, Seventh Ward.
WM. H. BULL, Sixteenth Ward.

After considerable debate, during which it was charged that the price of Mr. DRAPER's resignation was the repurchase of the Fort Gansevoort property, the preamble and resolutions were adopted by a vote of 22 to 7.

After some other business, the Committee adjourned.

SERIOUS COLLISION ON THE EAST RIVER.—About 8 o'clock yesterday morning, as the ferry boat Oneiaka, of the Peck-slip line, was on her way from Williamsburg, she came in collision with the ferry-boat George Law, of the James slip and South Tenth-street ferry, causing serious damage to the Oneiaka, and putting in jeopardy the lives and limbs of some three or four hundred passengers. At the time of the crash the passengers supposed their boat would sink, and considerable fright prevailed among them. The George Law, being a new and strong boat, sustained no damage, but the Oneiaka had her deck ripped up, and crushed in for eight feet. The escape of the crowded passengers from injury was almost miraculous. Had the boat sunk, there must have occurred an appalling loss of life, as the boats were about midway of the stream, and a strong tide was running at the time. The passengers on board the Oneiaka were greatly excited at what they regarded as the culpable carelessness of the pilot of the Law, many charging him with causing the collision intentionally, while the passengers on the Law were equally positive that the fault of the accident lay with the pilot of the Oneiaka. The account, as given by those who were on board the Law, is that they had reached the point of Corlear's Hook, going up, before the Oneiaka left her dock in Williamsburg, that they hugged the New-York shore, as is habitually the custom when there is a strong ebb tide, to keep in the eddy. It is always the custom for boats going down stream with the ebb tide to keep in the middle of the stream, but contrary to this rule the Oneiaka sheared out of her straight course to cross the bow of the Law to the right, while there was plenty of room for her to pass to the left; that the pilot of the Law put his helm to port to let her pass that way, when he saw a collision was certain to follow, and that the Oneiaka would strike him amidships, or against his wheel-house; he accordingly rung to stop and back, and at the same time turned the head of his boat so as to receive the concussion forward, instead of amidships, and that when the two boats struck the Law had turned six revolutions of her engine backwards; the Oneiaka, however, being heavily loaded, and coming down with the full force of the ebb tide made the collision greater.

ROCKWELL disclaims all intention to come in contact with the other boat, and asks a suspension of public opinion until the matter is investigated.

HOW THE NOMINATIONS WERE RECEIVED AT TAMMANY HALL AND THE PEWTER MUG.—There was no expression at Tammany Hall last evening, in relation to the nominations made by the State Convention at Syracuse—there were no cheers given, nor lights lit, nor was there any throng of disputants. There could not well be, for those who get up the enthusiasm on such occasions are out of town. When they return there will be, no doubt, a "Grand Demonstration," accompanied with "Great Enthusiasm."

At the "Pewter Mug" more interest was shown. It was crowded during the day, and all the extras with the "Very latest from Syracuse," could not satisfy them. The cry was for "more." Newsboys did a profitable business in the vicinity.

The proposition submitted by Mr. KELLY and adopted by the Convention, that eight of the Small and an equal number of the Cooper Committees be admitted, was regarded as an admittance that the former organization was the only legitimate one. The Small men seemed elated with the decision, though remarking that only half justice had been done them. The Savage men said little, and little was said about them, but the People's delegates were heartily laughed at, and it was wondered who footed the bills.

The resolutions given by Captain RUTHERFORD to Mayor WOOD were variously commented upon, and the force and personal bent in the Convention between His Honor and Hon. Daniel E. SICKLES led to debates, but all agreed that it must have been a rich scene between opponents of their calibre.

The ticket nominated appeared to give general satisfaction, and was spoken of as strong enough to sweep the State with the besom of municipal rights, "if the thing were properly managed."

The Mug is satisfied, and rejoices in its usual way.

St. George's vs. New-York.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The great match between the St. George's and the New-York Cricket Clubs, was terminated abruptly, on Thursday evening, by the New-Yorkers refusing to send in their last man. The cause assigned was that it was fifteen minutes after the hour (6 o'clock) at which the stumps were drawn, on the previous evening. But their own umpire remained on the field, and the New-Yorkers should know very well that while the umpires remain on the ground, they are bound to play. The umpire on the part of the St. George's, after waiting the usual time, called "play." When, no one appearing at the wicket, he, of course, claimed the victory. The play on both sides was the best we have witnessed for some time. The following is the score:

FRIDAY, Sept. 11—P. M.

The state of affairs in the Money market has not essentially changed to-day. The Banks that hold their discount sessions this morning did a liberal part, in most instances, for their regular dealers, dispensing accommodation to the most needy. The offerings, however, continue extensive, and the pressure amongst the merchants has evidently but partially abated. There was no prominent failure announced up to the close of Change hour, in the City. The telegraph advises two heavy suspensions in Providence, Rhode Island—Messrs. Philip Allen Tomes, a very old manufacturing firm, and Mr. Z. Allen, also in the same line of business. The combined liabilities are about two million dollars. Discounts, outside of Bank, are mainly confined to first-class paper at 15@18 ⅌ cent. Money at call is comparatively easy, particularly on good Stocks. The practice of lending at call on Bills receivable is in less favor. The banking houses in the foreign business, who are, in ordinary times, heavy lenders at call, are keeping themselves strong, and distributing their cash balances among the Banks, awaiting the more decided reassurance of mercantile confidence. Half a dozen firms that we could name have something like three millions of dollars on deposit, of which more than one-half is practically idle, as some of the Banks with which the money is left are indisposed to part with it, and so permit their Specie reserve to run up for the time being. No particular fault is found with this operation, though the causes which evidently induce it—the absence of the right sort of confidence among the parties owning or commanding these large balances, together with the indisposition of the Stock Brokers to enter upon new engagements—are to be regretted. We hope to see a change of feeling in this quarter in a few days, to the extent, at all events, of lending greater facilities for the export of Produce, for which considerable orders at present prices are understood to be in market. Exchange, to-day, was difficult to place at 8@8¼ ⅌ cent. on London; some Produce bills done at 7½@8 ⅌ cent. The Paris rates ranged 5.22½@5.18¾.

The Stock Market rules pretty steady, mostly on cash transactions, and the closing prices this afternoon are much the same as on Thursday, the turn being rather in favor of the rise. Reading left off 46@46¼ ⅌ cent; New-York Central, 70¾; Erie, 20¾; Panama, 80¾; Missouri, 70¼; Illinois Central, 93; Toledo, 35¾; Galena, 74¼; Michigan Central, 64¾. The tone of the market is quoted firm, with a good many small outside orders to buy for cash, but no decided indication yet of a speculative movement.

The Domestic Exchange firm of William J. Bunn & Co., connected with the Wisconsin exchanges, suspended payment to-day on account of their liability to make available the securities realized by their correspondents. A temporary general assignment has been made, in order to do full justice to all concerned, and to avoid attachments likely to grow out of the circumstance that five of the bankers are non-residents. We understand the suspension of an early resumption is indulged, as no great sacrifices have been submitted to, and the assets assigned are believed to be ample to meet the liabilities of the concern.

The circulating notes of the Bank of New-Jersey, at New-Brunswick, and of the Bank of Orleans, in this State, have been thrown out by the Metropolitan and American Exchange Banks.

We understand that the Hon. Jacob Thompson, Secretary of the Home Department, has recently availed of the low price of a number of the State Stocks to purchase about $600,000 for account of the various Indian trusts under the charge of his Department. It is his purpose, we believe, to extend these purchases so far as the existing authority from Congress will allow, in doing which he equally cheapens the average cost of the Indian investments of the Department, and accommodates the disbursements from the Treasury to the condition of the money market. Authority was sought from the last Congress to invest in State Stocks the whole of the permanent Indian annuities of the Government, but the movement failed by a close vote in the House of Representatives. These annuities, uninvested, amount to a sum equal to $7,008,667, if in a 5 ⅌ cent. stock, and the annual charge thereon is $350,000. The funded Indian annuities under the Government amounted last December, to the value of $12,717,548, the annual appropriation to the support thereof being $995,272. Independent of these principal two funds, the special Indian trusts reach at present, we believe, nearly five millions of dollars. They stood on the 1st of December $1,452,567 in the Chickasaw Fund, and $2,028,976 in the Home Department on sundry other tribes. The last item has since been enlarged, and both stand invested in State Stocks, or in Stocks guaranteed and indorsed by the States.

We should have referred before this to the card of Messrs. Thompson, Moses & Co., Domestic Exchange Brokers, who succeed to the business of Mr. J. Thompson, No. 2 Wall-street. The firm embraces S. C. and F. Thompson, and E. W. and W. S. Moses, all of whom have heretofore been employed in the office.

The Sub-Treasury received, to-day, $140,522, disbursed, $127,502, and held at the close, $10,584,950.

The receipts of the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company for Aug. 1857.....$99,062 58
Corresponding items Aug. 1856.....90,518 90

* These items were included in Miscellaneous Goods, in our export statement every week of last year. Hence, we cannot furnish comparative figures, in detail, this year. Next year we shall be enabled to do so regularly, by keeping up the record as now arranged through the current year.

A typographical error occurred in our republication of the Independent's weekly list of failures—whereby the notice of the suspension of Bock & Co. was made to read as that of Beck & Co.

London Money Market.

From the London Times, (City Article,) Aug. 29.

The additional details, published from India today, have produced great gloom, and the funds have experienced a further decline. The apparently disastrous conflict with the mutineers before Agra was the chief subject of regret, but increased uneasiness is felt from the fact of o'ning have been attempted at Hyderabad, where any serious movement might be likely to operate unfavorably on the Madras army. Scarcely any business was done during the operation of yesterday, 90⅞ @ 90⅞, and receded to 90¾, at which they continued for some time, with a very flat appearance. Ultimately there were buyers at 90¾ for money, while for the Sept. or September the last price was 90⅞ to ⅞. For the next account in October, transactions have been entered into at 90⅞. As the foreign exchanges show dullness, the market would have been more unfavorably affected but for the counteracting influence of a further large fall in the price of wheat and the continued prospect of gold arrivals.

In the Corn Market this morning there was a further decline of between 3s and 4s. ⅌ quarter.

In the foreign exchanges this afternoon the rates were generally a shade lower than the last post.

Money in other Cities.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

The money market presented a less gloomy aspect yesterday, though money was in active request, the best paper ruling at about 1½ per cent. a month. Railroad acceptances were quoted at 1¼@1½ ⅌ cent. a month, and second class bills at 2½@3. The Railroad companies are retiring their paper promptly as it matures. The Reading cashed nearly $10,000 yesterday, and we learn that the officers entertain the utmost confidence in their ability to continue to do so to the end of all that description of their liabilities afloat. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is equally prompt in meeting its liabilities.

The feeling was altogether better yesterday, and with the exercise of a little generous confidence among business men, the rigors of the crisis may be materially mitigated. The banks are affording what aid they can—they are generally in as good a condition as ever before, and better probably than are the banks in almost any other city in the Union. But a large amount of the paper of our merchants, and such paper as is ordinary times would be discounted by the New-York banks, has been thrown out there in reducing the discount line over four millions per week.

The effect of this movement at New York has been to throw that immatured paper on this market, to sell at whatever can be obtained for it. The bills being first-rate, our capitalists take them at a good round shave, giving checks on our own banks. This is drawn against, and Philadelphia just now being a debtor city to New-York, cash is taken. Consequently great circumspection is required by the banks.

From the Boston Traveller.

The demand for money to-day was less pressing, though in interest rates no special variation is noticeable; the range on first-class for the best commercial paper is 15@18 ⅌ cent. ⅌ annum. The drain of specie for the South has ceased for the present in consequence of the decline in New-York funds, which are now obtainable at par; within a few days they have been readily taken at a premium of 1-16 @⅛. Our Banks will not be in a position to discount to any material extent until their specie reserve is reinforced.

From the Cincinnati Gazette.

The discount houses are doing very little in the way of lending money, and this department of financial business may still be regarded as in a state of suspense. Rates for money are nominal, and we do not think it worth while to use figures. But, notwithstanding the scarcity of money, there is no pressure upon the market. Business men, knowing the condition of money matters, rely upon their own resources, and there is, therefore, very little mercantile paper offering. Eastern Exchange is quite scarce, and rates of premium have advanced to 1@1½ prem.—the latter for bankers' checks. For gold 1½ prem. is the wholesale, and ⅞@1 prem. the retail price. No bills offering. In New-Orleans Exchange there is nothing doing, and quotations are wholly nominal.

The notes of the Bank of Kanawha are selling at 70@[illegible]. There has been no official qualification as to the cause of the failure of this company. It appears to have closed its doors with all immediate notice to its agents. It is to be hoped that it will not again attempt to resume business. It has never been regarded upon the principles of legitimate banking—the circulation has always been forced, and it required an extraordinary amount of bolstering and indorsing to induce the people to permit the notes to pass through their hands.

We have as new failures to notice with reference to the Trust Co. The liabilities in this city have been reduced to a comparatively small amount by the exchange of securities for checks. The demand for the latter is now limited, and the market is dull at 75@75. Confidence is distributing, but whether there is any ground for this change in public feeling, we are not able to say. A Committee of Investigation went to New-York by the Trustees, are at work in that city, and a full exhibit is now looked for daily.

Produce at Tide-Water.

From the Albany Journal.

The quantity of flour, wheat, corn and barley left at tide-water during the first week in September in the years 1856 and 1857, is as follows:

When the	Wheat, bush.	Corn, bush.	Barley, bush.
1856	167,179	491,710	24,647
1857	71,747	971,960	76,017
Dec.	Dec. 91,432	Inc. 140,250	Inc. 51,370

The aggregate quantity of the same articles left at tide-water from the commencement of navigation to the 7th of September inclusive, during the years 1856 and 1857, is as follows:

When the	Wheat, bush.	Corn, bush.	Barley, bush.
1856	1,151,718	5,052,709	5,285,242	520,452
1857	904,023	1,708,711	5,320,252	318,022
Dec.	Dec. 247,695	Dec. 3,343,998	Dec. 1,957,010	Dec. 11,410

By reducing the wheat to flour the quantity of the latter left at tide-water this year, compared with the corresponding period of last year, shows a deficiency on the first session of 308,160 bbls. of flour.

The following table shows the quantity of some of the principal articles of produce left at tide-water from the commencement of navigation to the 7th September, inclusive, during the years 1856, 1855 and 1854:

Attractions at Purdy's National Theatre.—No Theatre in this City can boast of as many and varied attractions, at the same time, as can Manager Purdy, of the National. First we have Mr. G. J. Foster, a tragedian of high talent, and destined to become as great a favorite as was the late J. R. Scott; then comes the inimitable G. L. Fox, who, as a comedian and pantomimist, stands equal, if not superior, to any in the country. A fine Company is also engaged. Then there are the Demas Brothers, performers; Mons. Chiomi, dancer and pantomimist; Mr. J. Gomez, comic singer; Mr. Sig Wood, Ethiopian dancer, &c., &c. To night they all appear. "The Queen of the Abruzzi," "The Magic Hands," "The Lady of the Lake," and "The Dead Shot."

$500 Reward.—To anti Nuisance.—Within a few months parties who have received money for entering money from me, have original money, and efforts are numerous to impose on me, upon all of which are HARMLESS PREPARATIONS, without any foundation whatever in truth. Those who tell you to the effect that I receive money and do not use it, do so for it is that my Extract of Garlic may be done away and poisonous; that I am non-resident, and that in reality a young man, connected with good business, of a respectable profession, and that I am "a nobleman," and I know not what else that is vile and unworthy. These slanders have gained a wide circulation, owing to the pleasure the honorable editors of newspapers take in copying about "spicy" paragraphs in which individuals are defamed, and I resort to this method of nailing them as absurd and wicked lies, detracting to my feelings, and injurious to the interests of the invalid portion of the public. I offer a reward of Five Hundred Dollars to any one who will bring forward sufficient proof that the slanders above alluded to, or any statement detrimental to my character and the claims I make upon public confidence, emboly a shadow of truth! Any one who will show, to the satisfaction of respectable and unprejudiced parties, that I have, in any way, deceived, or overreached the most benevolent of beings, or in the smallest degree violated the principles of justice, shall receive the above reward, for which I can abundantly vouch—and, as I can easily be ascertained by inquiring. Any person impressed by the slanders of which I complain, will be convinced of their injustice by writing to me. H. James, M. D., Known as "The Retired Physician," No. 19 Grand-st., Jersey City, N. J.

STRANGERS REQUIRING GIFTS AND FRESH cuts should visit the extensive Bazaar of H. S. ROGERS No. 489 Broadway, as every conceivable variety can be found there. Beautiful Jet Ornaments, Fans, Card Cases, Work-boxes and Dressing Cases, together with Toys, Dolls and Games suitable for all ages. Sold at the lowest prices of importation.

PARTIAL DEAFNESS AND DISCHARGES FROM THE EAR.—Dr. HARTLEY generously offers to attend all persons suffering from affections of the ear, at his office, No. 409 Broadway, without charge, until cured—thereby proving his success unequaled, and protecting the deaf from being swindled, by paying self-styled Aurists exorbitant fees in advance, and the infliction of still more serious evils, by permitting the application of dangerous remedies by inexperienced and unskillful hands. Dr. H. may here state that he has no connection whatever with any person advertising to cure deafness; neither has he given permission for the publication of certificates, purporting to emanate from him; and cannot, therefore, be responsible for any alarming consequences resulting from rashness and desperation. The loss of a copy may not be material to some persons, but the deprivation of one of the most important of the senses ought to be regarded and treated with more than ordinary solicitude. Deafness, noises in the head, and all disagreeable discharges from the ear, speedily and permanently removed, without causing the least pain or inconvenience. A cure in all cases guaranteed where malformation does not exist. Thirteen years' close and almost undivided attention to this branch of special practice has enabled him to reduce his treatment to such a degree of success as to find the most confirmed and obstinate cases yield by a steady attention to the means prescribed.

GREAT FIRE IN NEW-ORLEANS.—EXTRACT [illegible] from a letter from New-Orleans to T. F. TWIFFY, Agent for Herring's Patent Champion Safes: "The day after you left we had quite a large fire here. One of the stores destroyed was occupied by Messrs. Elliott & Co. The Herring's Patent Safe which they bought was in the fire several hours, and when opened the books and papers were found to be in a perfect state of preservation. They are well satisfied with it and will purchase another when their start again. I have let them have our back office until their store is rebuilt, which will be about the 1st of September. Yours, THOMAS TWIFFY. New-Orleans, Aug., 1857. N. B. Herring & Co., manufacturers, Green Block, Nos. 125, 127 and 129 Water-st., and 251 Broadway, corner Murray-st., New-York.

WATSON'S $10 SEWING MACHINES.—ANOTHER INJUNCTION AGAINST THEM.—On the 24 day of August instant, the United States Circuit Court for the southern district of New York, granted an injunction in a suit prosecuted by I. M. Singer & Co. against Watson, Wooster & Co. This injunction absolutely prohibits the defendants and their agents from making, using, selling, or advertising for sale the Watson $10 Machine. Newspaper publishers will please take notice of this injunction, and not assist in violating it. I. M. SINGER & CO., No. 458 Broadway.

SEWING MACHINES.—ALL PERSONS WHO want a sewing machine of wonderful utility, one that will sew the Robert and the heaviest fabrics Rubber then rip out of order, and with which an industrious woman can readily earn $5 per day, can obtain it, no where except at the office of I. M. SINGER & CO., No. 458 Broadway, New-York.

ORANGE "MOUNTAIN HOUSE," SOUTH ORANGE, N. J.—JOHN SUTHERLAND begs to announce to his friends and the public that he has taken the above hotel, and intends that in future it shall rank with the best hotels in America for comfort and quality of the table.
This hotel possesses peculiar advantages, both as a Summer and Winter residence, from the fact of its having been previously a hydropathic establishment.
1. It has a thorough supply of pure and delicious spring water, brought from a reservoir upon the mountain, and laid on throughout the house. The majority of the rooms contain hot and cold baths.
2. The situation was chosen especially for its salubrity and its sheltered position in the Winter, making it a charming and healthful resort for invalids.
3. The walks upon the premises (which consist of 19 acres of lawn and woodland) are delightful, and require to be seen to be appreciated, being really beyond the powers of description.
4. Its proximity to New-York (being but 14 miles) allows the gentlemen who's families are residing there to be at business in New-York by 9 o'clock in the morning, and return either at 3¼, 5¼0, or 6¼0 P. M.
The above are a few of the advantages of this hotel, but there are many more which cannot be enumerated in an advertisement.
The table is unexceptionable; and, in short, all that can be done to make the boarders comfortable, Jno. Sutherland will endeavor to accomplish.
Cars per Morris and Essex Railroad leave foot of Cortlandt-st. at 6¼ and 11½ a. m., and 3¼, 5¼0 and 6¼0 P. M. A stage is in attendance at the South Orange Station.
JNO. SUTHERLAND, Proprietor.

THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION,

In the Second District, it was stated that some difficulty existed, and the delegates desired time to consider the selection made last night.

For the Third District no report was made.

For the Seventh District it was also said that some difficulty had arisen; and the report they had made, nominating F. B. Jewett and Pomeroy Tucker as members of the Committee, was referred back.

The full list of the State Committee stands as follows:

District.
1.—Peter B. Sweeny, Fernando Wood.
2.—Sam. Fowler, D. R. Floyd Jones.
3.—Peter Cagger and —— McArthur.
4.—Col. Stone, —— Guthrey.
5.—H. M. Cotes, John Stryker.
6.——— Hubbard, —— Beebee.
7.—A. B. Jewett, Pomeroy Tucker.
8.—Dean Richmond, Wm. Vandervoort.

THE COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

District.
1.—John Cochrane, Fernando Wood.
2.—Barlow, of Suffolk; Greenwell, of Westchester.
3.——— Platt, Greene; Cagger, Albany.
4.—D. C. Smith, Schenectady. —— Dwyer, Essex.
5.—H. Seymour, Oneida; —— Beardsley, Oswego.
6.—Hubbard, Chemung; —— Shaw, Otsego.
7.—Davis, Steuben; Stark, Monroe.
8.—Piper, Niagara; Britton, Chautauqua.

Mr. Ludlow is Chairman of the Committee.

Mr. Shaw, of Orange, moved that the Convention proceed by ballot to nominate candidates for the office of Secretary of State.

Mr. Cochrane moved to amend, by proceeding to open the nomination for Secretary of State.

The motion to fill by counties prevailed, and the following nominations were made:

Gilbert D. Tucker, of New-York.
Gideon H. Scott, of Saratoga.

An informal ballot was taken for Secretary of State, and when Broome County was called, Mr. Barrow proposed H Henry S. Randall was a candidate.

Mr. Hammond, of Cortlandt, presented a letter from Mr. Randall, respectfully but positively refusing a nomination.

Gideon J. Tucker had a large majority, New-York voting for him unanimously; and he was on the first ballot declared nominated by acclamation.

On motion of the delegates from Saratoga County, an informal ballot was then taken for Comptroller; Sanford E. Church, of Orleans; Alfred M. Wood, of Kings, and Thomas R. Mitchell, of Steuben, being put in nomination. Sanford E. Church received a unanimous nomination amidst loud applause, the other candidates being withdrawn.

For Attorney-General, Lyman Tremaine, of Albany; Benjamin Bailey, of Putnam, and Francis Kernan, of Oneida, were put in nomination, and Lyman Tremaine was nominated by the Convention on acclamation.

For State Treasurer—Isaac V. Vanderpool, of Erie; J. M. Lyon, of Oneida; and Thomas Osborn, of Chautauque, were put in nomination, Mr. Vanderpool was unanimously nominated.

For State Engineer and Surveyor—V. R. Richmond, of Wayne, was nominated.

For State Prison Inspector—William C. Rhodes, of Elmira, received the nomination.

On the renomination for Canal Commissioner, some severe remarks were made by Sickles and Woon. On the name of Charles D. Graham being presented, Sickles charged Woon with being a "Know-Nothing," and Woon retorted very bitterly, charging Sickles with voting with the Republicans in the Senate. Mr. Sickles rose to reply, but was the same time prevented by the crowd of outsiders, who were packed in Woon's corner, and who endeavored to drown his voice by cries and stamping. About the time that Sickles was compelled to adjourn he replied in a singularly bitter speech, in which he severely lashed Mayor Woon, charged him with being a branded Know-Nothing; with not daring to contradict that statement, but shielding himself against false charges brought against him (Sickles.) These charges were simply repetition of stale, worn-out slanders uttered by a Black Republican irresponsible and degraded sheet, that had supported Woon for Governor and Fremont for President. A Black whole employes by a bribe of a penny above their wages would forsake the Christian Cross for the Turkish Crescent.

His speech was repeatedly interrupted by loud applause.

After this breeze was over, Van R. Richmond, of Wayne, was nominated on the first ballot.

The Convention proceeded to nominate a State Prison Inspector, and William C. Rhodes was unanimously nominated after the first ballot.

The Convention then adjourned till 3 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Immediately on the reassembling of the Convention Mr. John Kelly offered a resolution relating to the settlement of the difficulties in New-York, and looking to the abandonment of the present Ward organizations, and of the Union, Cooper, and Wilson Sub-Committees.

Mr. Shaw moved that the resolution be laid on the table till after the report of the regular resolutions.

Mr. Thomas Byrnes said he was opposed to the last resolution; it sought to abolish all Ward organizations. Mr. Byrnes said that he represented a Ward in the City of New-York, containing 1,800 Democratic votes, and the man who dared to present a ticket with the name of Judge Denio upon it, would go over the dock, "by the Eternal."

The resolution was tabled.

SPEECH OF EX GOVERNOR SEYMOUR.

Ex Governor Seymour asked the indulgence of the Convention for one moment. For three days, at the expense of interests very important to him, he had remained in the city, because he felt himself compelled to do so by a great duty—one of those duties by which men are occasionally compelled to come forth and take many a stand, even against popular feeling. The time had been when he had found it his duty to stand up in the Executive Chair against a bill which he considered an attack upon the personal rights and liberties of the people of the State, and at that time was compelled to brave the attacks of fanaticism and the denunciations of many bad and some good men, and had not flinched from his duty. He should not do so now. Although it was always an unthankful task to oppose the personal feelings of warm friends and to urge upon them a course to which naturally they felt peculiarly opposed. But this was a moment of the utmost importance to the reputation and welfare of the great Democratic Party. It had often been the province of the Democrats to rebuke that party while, setting up for itself the standard of false philanthropy, and which stood ready to denounce the Judiciary and Executive whenever, in their opinion, they fell short of that standard. On more than one occasion the Democrats had been compelled to stand up and rebuke the fanaticism of the pulpit and press which sought to break down the independence of the Court of Appeals. They had deemed it a duty over to denounce those who struck a blow at these institutions of our land. Recently they had suffered a defeat when the tide of fanaticism had set too strongly against them; but already they felt the returning of the tides, and were advised that the sentiment of the country had changed and was with them again.

He reviewed the course of the Republicans, who had struck since the last election the deadliest blow at the principles of local self-government that it had ever received, and showed the necessity for rescuing the State from the power of such men. He held that wrongs had been inflicted on the Empire City of the Empire State too flagrant to be quietly borne, and that the whole State must join with the City in the attempt to do justice to the metropolis, and repeal those laws. But this question should go to the country unencumbered by any other considerations. Our opponents say out against us that this wrong is constitutional. They would have the world believe that nothing can be oppressive and unconscionable that is constitutional. Now, the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of these laws was not matter for consideration now. Their odious injustice is what the Democracy complain of. He was aware that many good Democrats feared that the party might place itself in a wrong position on this question by assuming in any manner to indorse any one entertaining views adverse to those of a great majority of the party. But the Democrats, it must be remembered, had always stood up and denounced men who assailed our Judiciary, and they have never allowed judicial independence to be interfered with.

He reminded the Convention that a few years ago, when the Court of Appeals declared a law which conflicted with private rights, to be unconstitutional, the attacks of the Opposition were as base as they were impolitic, upon the Judges so deciding. He ventured to argue that the party might well be convinced of inconsistency, if they now suffered private feeling to be paramount to the public good. If, in his judgment, it might be—on the part of one of these Judges to extricate the Democracy from him. He paid an eloquent and glowing tribute to the private virtues and professional abilities of Judge Denio; and reminded the Democrats that it would be a noble act to conquer not only their opponents, but also their feelings and prejudices. He declared his conviction that New-York would rise above all personal feeling in this matter, and would vote for Judge Denio out of respect for his virtues, and to show how high and noble a position the Democracy occupies in its respect for the perfect and entire independence of its Judiciary.

SPEECH OF MAYOR WOOD.

Mayor Woon now took the platform. He said that he rose under peculiar embarrassment to take a part in this debate. The embarrassment arose a part from the great contrast which he knew would be apparent between the humble abilities of himself and those of the distinguished gentlemen who preceded him. It also existed in view of his personal, official and political connection with the great question, with which the merits of the nomination, if made, will be connected.

He could say that he responded fully and entirely to almost every word and sentiment uttered by the gentleman from Oneida. He responded fully to the statement that upon the Democratic Party of the country had devolved the duty to uphold the Judiciary and shield it against the attacks of the opposition; but he desired to make the additional remark that he recognized as the great element of this Government that it should be divided into three departments—Legislative, Executive and Judicial—and that neither should interfere with the other. As the gentleman said, truly stated, it has rested on the Democratic Party to remedy abuses of this character. It was so in the days when Andrew Jackson was called to the Chair. When a dastard attempt was made to encroach upon his prerogative the Democracy stood by him in his darkest hour. When the Executive has endeavored to strike at the liberty and privileges of the people, then also has the Democracy stood by the right. Now, as in the days of Jackson, the Democratic Party will stand by those whose privileges and prerogatives are unjustly assailed. Gentlemen could bear witness that he was in his own person practically an exponent of submission to the judicial authority. He respected the bench right or wrong. He had never set up his own opinion against any judicial tribunal in the land, and never as were his rights that were assailed by the Metropolitan Police bill, and much as he had sacrificed pecuniary and otherwise, expending, as he had, ten thousand dollars of his own money upon it, he was the first to bow in submission to the decision of the Court. He could, therefore, claim to be a law-abiding citizen, and, no man, he could safely say, regarded with more respectful feeling the paramount principles and almost sacred character of all Courts. He had voted against the present Constitution of the State, because it made the Judges elective. He was opposed to bringing the Judiciary into contact with the dirty pool of party warfare. But that the present Constitution was adopted, and by it the Judges have become elective, and have become party candidates voted for on pure party tickets. There was no disguising the fact that all parties do present candidates for all judicial offices on political considerations. Their names are presented as party men, and it has become impossible to separate party and the Judiciary. To come directly to the questions before them, what was this body? It was a representative of the Democracy of the State, called together for the purpose of nominating a ticket to be voted for by the Democratic Party and no other.

The delegates represented a political party; they met under usage and policy—met to nominate a ticket acceptable to the people of the State. It was proper then to nominate a ticket acceptable to the people themselves. The Convention had come to what he considered the main and most important point. They had formed a ticket with peculiar harmony, and every name had been presented on party considerations. It is eminently proper in this case, too, to inquire how far the principles of the nominee square with the principles of the Democratic party. He asked, is Denio a Democrat? [Loud cries of "Yes—Yes," "—No—No!"] What is the principle of the Democratic Party, he would ask?

A Voice—To be independent. [Loud applause.]

Mr. Wood continued—Was there a Democrat who would simply vote a Democratic ticket as such without regard to Democratic principles? He would hold no Judges responsible politically for his opinions expressed judicially; but when a Judge who holds his position from the gift of the Democracy makes decisions hostile and repugnant to the principles of the Democratic party, he would ask if he could be considered a Democrat? [Cries of "Oh! yes he can," and "No, no."]

When a Judge presents himself for a party nomination, it is surely proper to ask his opinion upon a question drawing so deep a line between a Federal party and the Democracy. It is right to look into his acts, speeches and opinions, to find the position he occupies. He could appreciate the kind feelings of his friend who had advocated the claims of Judge Denio. That gentleman had not an enemy in the State. He responded to all the sentiments uttered by that gentleman. He was not here, indeed, to oppose the nomination of Judge Denio, because he had given an opinion in favor of an act against him as Mayor Woon, but because he had given an opinion adverse to the principles of the Democratic Party—because he had promulgated opinions that would permit the Legislature of the State of New-York to make slaves of every county in the State—an opinion that would permit them, by joining the County of Onondaga with an adjoining county, to oppress the citizens of Syracuse. He desired the Convention to remember there was a wide difference between rendering obedience to judicial authority and indorsing the principles of their opinions. How could the Democracy stultify itself by going before the people to denounce a law, when they have a candidate for the Judiciary on their ticket who upholds that law?

POST-SCRIPT.

SATURDAY, FOUR O'CLOCK, A. M.

The Nomination of Judge Denio for the Court of Appeals.

Report of the Committee on Resolutions.

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE.

CONTINUATION OF MAYOR WOOD'S REMARKS.

There was a wide difference, he held, between this and the Dred Scott case. The Black Republicans denounce Judge Taney for that decision; but there is a wide difference between denouncing a Judge and refusing to indorse his opinion. He was prepared to see the nomination of Judge Denio made in this Convention, but he was here to protest against it on behalf of the Democracy of the City of New-York. He was here to say that if they made that nomination, they would look in vain for 40,000 majority from New-York City. He would vote for him himself if nominated, but it is an inexpedient, impolitic and improper nomination. It was a nomination not fit to be made, and they would presently have resolutions presented denouncing the Police Bill; but how could they go before the people with these resolutions on one side and Judge Denio on the other? He should give his vote in the Convention against him because he did not consider him a Democrat as he understood Democracy, and because his nomination would be an insult to New-York City.

Mr. Morgan spoke a few words amidst confusion, and was understood to be against Judge Denio.

Rufus W. Peckham, of Albany, now took the platform, and commenced speaking, but the boys entered with the New-York dailies, and the members made wild and precipitate dives towards the boys, crying for the Times, Herald, Tribune, News, interrupting the proceedings, till Capt. Rynders, in a fit of generosity, threw a handful of a liver in the boy's hands, and bought up the whole stock, which he distributed gratis.

Mr. Peckham then reviewed Mayor Wood's speech, which he designated as ingenious but utterly fallacious. That gentleman had commenced by declaring that he had the highest respect for the judiciary, and before concluding had stated that he would not give his support to Denio. Because why? Because he had given judicial sanction to a law which he (Mayor Wood) did not approve.

Mayor Wood, interrupting, said he had made no such assertion.

Mr. Peckham continued. He did not think he had misrepresented the gentleman. He had said that Judge Denio was unfit for a seat on the bench. And why unfit? His life extolled—his abilities admitted—but he differed from other Democrats in the results he arrived at by reasoning a certain measure.

Here was Judge Denio, a man of pure life and marked ability, who, because he failed to come up to what the gentleman thinks is the right standard of Democracy, was to be denounced as no Democrat; as a man unfit to sit on the bench; and as unworthy of the nomination of this Convention. This was a harsh verdict to render on any man, even for political office, much less for judicial one.

He had acted with Mayor Woon on most questions which come before the Convention, but could not in this. He did not believe the Convention was prepared to cast a Judge aside because he differed from the Democracy of the State on a question of law. He proceeded to argue that the question of the constitutionality of the law had no relation to its merits, saying that we might as well attack a constable for the service of a process as Judge Denio for his judicial opinion on this law. Indeed, the decision given against his own friends and with the knowledge that it would excite their opposition was a proof of his honesty and integrity. Democrats, he believed, were not prepared to regard the independence of the judiciary in such a light as to say to the Judges you decided on our side on the prohibitory law.

Then you were all right, but you decide against us on the Police bill, and now you are all wrong. Our bench can never stand if such be the test. No man with self-respect would accept a judicial office when told when you decide with the Democratic Party you are worthy and when against it you are unworthy. Yet this was the character that Mayor Woon would give to the Judiciary. He concluded by urging the nomination of Judge Denio as every way honorable and fit to be made.

Daniel E. Sickles then took the platform. He said he would detain the Convention only long enough to explain the motives that influenced him in voting for the candidate for the Court of Appeals. It was not his intention to follow the gentleman who had preceded him. Every delegate occupying a place in that Hall had a two-fold position—a position as the exponent of his individual wishes and a position as the exponent of the wishes of his constituency. If the question before that body as presented in the nomination of Judge Denio was a question of endorsement of the wisdom and fairness and policy of the Metropolitan Police Law. There could be no room for an instant hesitation. Their platform would denounce the folly, injustice and wickedness of the principles contained in that statute, and express the resolution of the Democracy to repeal that law and place the seal of reprobation upon it. But he, as speaking for himself, did not understand that any such issue was presented here in the person of Judge Denio. He did not pass on the fairness or justice of the legislation. It was the Legislature that did that. The sole issue presented to Judge Denio and his associates, who were bound by their oath of office, was to consider the Legislature had power, and whether the Constitution by its terms and letter denied to the Legislature the power to pass such a Statute.

Judge Denio, acting with a large majority of his colleagues of that Court, said the Constitution did not prohibit it. In this he differed from many able and erudite lawyers and from a large portion of the people of the State. But he believed that every man would concede that Judge Denio reached that decision through a pure heart and bright intellect. We may have been in error in his opinion, as what man may not? but to say that a man for differing in opinion on a single question with political friends is to be considered as faithless to his party and alien to its principles was absurd. Why only ten years ago, prior to the Convention of 1846, Judges were appointed by the Governor and Senate, and was it ever heard or dreamed of that any Governor or Senate would remove a Judge because he had decided a political question against his political friends? No, for such an act would have consigned the party that sanctioned it to merited oblivion. It is for us to say that we will dismiss an upright Judge from power because he commits an error of judgment. We are called upon to do an act we should have condemned if performed by the Governor and Senate. It was due to the Convention that he should declare as a representative of New-York constituency, as an exponent of their wishes, and as in duty representing their desires and feelings, he could not support the nomination of Judge Denio. He should not fairly and honorably represent his constituency if he did not say here that they do not wish Judge Denio as their candidate. In this he differed with them. He had said so to them at home, and might say so here. He had told his constituents when directed to cast his vote for another candidate, that they had committed an act which aimed a blow at the very heart of Democratic Government, before which the Democracy might fall, before which it might fall. He said to the Convention that if here as his own representative the vote he would then give for Judge Denio would be the precedent of his life—but it was his duty and his purpose to meet his vote for some other person. [Loud applause.]

Mr. Cochrane next took the stand. He said the main question was whether Democratic principles would suffer in the selection or rejection of Judge Denio for the Court of Appeals. There was a wide difference between the denunciation of the Judiciary as it exists, and the selection of a new candidate for the Bench.

He held that if Judge Denio should now be withdrawn the questions would be in regard to the new candidate—is he capable and faithful? is he honest? There was certainly no fallaciousness in saying that the same questions were pertinent in relation to Judge Denio, who was not to be continued in office, but to be renominated for a new term. Since the adoption of the new Constitution, political parties had recognized the right to elect candidates for the Judiciary upon party considerations, and it could be no fallacy to say that Judge Denio's qualifications were proper matters of discussion now.

This argument was designed to prove that the Democratic Party had always recognized the principle of inquiring into the Democratic soundness of a candidate for the Bench as for all other officers. As the Attorney-General was selected on account of his acquirements and Democratic principles so should Judges be selected. He expected the Convention would not be frightened by the ghost of judicial independence. It was not present here to-day. He desired to add his testimony to the high character and attainments of the gentleman whose claims were now under debate. Probably no brighter luminary now shines in the judicial firmament—but we are called on now to select a candidate for the Court of Appeals whose name will be proper and expedient to present to the people of the State for support. By this district, New York, he might say there was no difference of opinion—all were unanimous in desiring a candidate who should present a direct issue with the measures of the last Legislature, the iron of which had entered so deeply into their souls.

John Kelly rose to speak, when a delegate from the rural districts suggested that as the opinion of the New-York delegates was tolerably well known by this time, it might be as well to take the sentiments of persons from other parts of the State.

Mr. Kelly proceeded to say that Judge Denio had deluged the streets of the City of New-York in blood with regard to these very laws, and it would be wrong for the Convention to nominate him and expect the people of New-York to support him. He had no fear in saying that you can never persuade the people of New-York of Judge Denio. He thought the time of the Convention had already been sufficiently consumed on this subject, and moved that they now proceed by the method before used to name candidates for the Court of Appeals.

Mr. Ludlow objected to the mode of making nominations heretofore adopted by the Convention. He desired to nominate at will and not by counties. He named Selah B. Strong, of Suffolk, as a candidate, at the same time paying a high compliment to his nominee.

Amasa G. Parker, of Albany, being nominated, he was immediately withdrawn by Peter Cagger.

John E. Brown, of Orange, was nominated, but withdrawn by Daniel C. Burdsall.

Hiram Denio, Selah B. Strong and John Willard were then named as the candidates.

On the first ballot Judge Denio received 67 out of 117 votes.

Fernando Wood inquired if this was a majority of all the votes in the Convention.

The Chairman stated that it was.

Fernando Wood—Then, Sir, I move that Hiram Denio be declared unanimously nominated as the candidate for the Court of Appeals.

The Chairman put the affirmative and a large majority answering "aye," he declared the resolution carried, when cries, "Put the the other side" resounded.

This was done, and several delegates and a large number of outsiders answered "No."

Much excitement prevailed.

Thomas Byrnes, of New-York, made a violent demonstration of dissatisfaction, but eventually was calmed down by his friends.

The firing of the Albany cannon by the Buck and Brock Club, which has been here during the session of the Convention, then announced the completion of the Democratic State Ticket.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

The Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions announced that the Committee was prepared to report, and stated that by request the resolutions would be read by Mr. Edwin Croswell.

Mr. Croswell commenced reading, but owing to weakness of voice handed the task over to Mr. Ludlow.

The following are the resolutions:

Resolved, That we congratulate the people of this Union upon the election of James Buchanan to the Presidency of the United States, and that we point to his wise and patriotic course in the Chief Magistracy, not only as refuting all the predictions of evil with which his opponents endeavored to darken the public mind; but as vindicating the theory of our Republican system, by proving the instinctive correctness of the popular judgment, which, at a crisis of a peculiar nature, threatening the peace, if not the existence of the Union, sought, and called to the Executive Chair, the statesman whose firmness, fearlessness and sagacity were alone equal to the emergency.

Resolved, That we deplore and denounce as the source of unmitigated evil, that sectional agitation which has so long disturbed the public mind. That we repudiate the doctrine that the people of our State have the right of inquisition into the domestic institutions of other and independent communities; or can properly make them the subject of their own internal politics; and that we equally deny the assumption that the people of any Territory, presenting themselves at the doors of Congress with a State Constitution, Republican in its character, and similar in its organic element to those of the original 18 States, can be refused admission into the Union on the ground of non conformity to modern and sectional tests; and that we congratulate the people of Kansas upon the opportunity which they now have, unawed by external dictation and undisturbed by seditious combinations at home, and of carrying out the principles of the organic act, establishing the Territory by adopting a Constitution which shall leave to their own people the right of deciding upon the character of their domestic institutions and polity.

Resolved, That while we deprecate all partisan attempts to revoke Slavery agitation and excitement, we approve the position and applaud the spirit of the recent admirable letter of President Buchanan in answer to the communication from several clerical and other residents of Northern States. That in our judgment this entire Kansas question, whether of historical fact or governmental action, is placed therein upon its true basis; the obligations of the Government, and the rights of the people of the Territory clearly defined; and the essential principle which lies at the foundation of our whole scheme of territorial organization, rightly to inforce the principle so recently avowed by Congress as the true intent and meaning of the "Kansas Nebraska Act"—that "it is not the design to legislate Slavery into any Territory or State, or to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof free to regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject to the Constitution of the United States." This Convention declares its unqualified adherence, as the groundwork of the adjustment of this dangerous Slavery controversy, in the only form sanctioned by the Constitution, consistent with its compromise with the rights of the States, and with a just recognition of our enlightened public sentiment.

Resolved, That the excess to which our political opponents have carried misgovernment in the State, calls for the immediate interposition of the people; that at this moment we behold the State seriously embarrassed in its finances, and the State debt accumulating; the State taxes have increased seven-fold within the last ten years; the canals, once a source of pride and affluence to the State, impoverished and dependent upon direct taxes for their progress; and that we cannot but feel that the example of improvidence set by the State has spread into the business affairs of the people, inviting them to hazardous speculations, the anticipation of future resources by the present reckless expenditure, profuse debt, and the abuse of credit, and that we call upon the people to remedy this state of affairs by establishing a sound and economical financial policy at Albany.

Resolved, That as evidences of the incapacity of our political opponents we point to the various attempts to legislate the people of our State into Temperance by coercive enactments and statutory penalties; at one time dispensing with trial by Jury in the citizen's case, and proceeding to a summary confiscation by the seizure and confiscation of property; and at another time passing a series of crude and lax enactments, difficult of interpretation, vexatious in their practical character, and which, among other incongruities, limit the right of petition to property holders; the practical effect of which legislation has been to put back the cause of true temperance, and to harrass the people and unnerve them in their business by needless prosecutions and offensive legislation.

Resolved, That the late Legislature completed the circle of its errors, follies and wrongs by attempting to punish the lion-hearted Democracy of our commercial metropolis for their resistance to the tide of fanaticism which last Fall rolled through the State, by depriving them of their ancient municipal liberties and chartered privileges, and placing over them irresponsible Commissioners, appointed by the Executive authority of the State, and by uniting them to other counties merging the powers of the local magistracy into that of these political boards, and that the people are justified in viewing with alarm these acts of centralization as fatal to the liberties of a free people; and that we pledge ourselves to unite in a conservative effort throughout the State, to rebuke this aggression and corruption and to advocate the rights of our fellow-citizens by memorializing delinquent Legislatures to repeal these acts of Legislative usurpation, being parts of a systematic evasion of popular sovereignty as evidenced by the invasions of a similar nature upon the local rights of Erie, Schuyler, and other counties.

Resolved, That the attempt to open the Constitution and reverse the well settled judgment of the people by substituting to the elective franchise the selfsyled population of the State, without the requirements of a property qualification, or a three years' residence. That we believe its design to be to invite into this State and incorporate into its constituency the free negroes and runaway slaves of other States, in order to strengthen the ranks of our opponents in their warfare upon the Constitution and the Union; and that we call upon the electors of New-York not to be deceived by the device or accident of a misprint at the commencement in the pigeon holes of the Executive Chamber in the belief that our opponents have relinquished this scheme, but to interrogate the candidates for the Senate and Assembly in regard to it, and to hold them to strict accountability.

Resolved, That the Democratic Party shall maintain where they have always stood, the friends and protectors of the exile, seeking a home and freedom on our shores; that they recognize the equality of all citizens before the law, and especially the sacred rights of religious liberty; and they regard all attempts to prevent the immigration of the laboring masses of Europe, whether by retaining their rights of citizenship, or by denying them access to civil employment and position, as unbecoming a great and powerful Commonwealth, and as injurious to the best interests of the people.

Resolved, That we declare the resolutions of the Black Republican Legislature, declaring its want of confidence in the Supreme Court of the United States, as a blow at the independence of the judiciary, and an uncalled for assumption of judicial functions by a Legislative Department, and that, on the contrary, we regard the decision of that Court respecting the political state of the negroes as conforming to the traditional policy of the several States and of the Federal Government, and essential to the rights of the States as independent sovereigns and to their security as communities; and that we fully concur with that tribunal in holding that while each State can confer what franchises it pleases upon the subjects of its jurisdiction, it cannot enable them to carry such privileges into other States without their concurrence or the sanction of the general Government.

Resolved, That to the ticket this day nominated we pledge our hearty, cordial, and united support, and that we invoke in its behalf the aid of all citizens who desire to restore good government to the State, and to maintain it in the Union, and who feel the necessity of resisting and defying that combination of fanaticism and corruption, against which the Democratic Party presents the only bulwarks of defense.

Resolved, That the Democracy of New-York, assembled for the purpose of consultation upon the destiny of the Party and of the Country, can not meet together without feeling a deep consciousness of the loss which both have sustained in the death of William L. Marcy—His wisdom, his fidelity, his varied ability, and great administrative talents, while they enable him to render vast service to his country, were the admiration of his countrymen and of the civilized governments throughout the world; and as we behold this great column in the edifice fallen, it behoves us all to unite our hands in sustaining that branch of the Union, of which he was at once the ornament and support.

The Resolutions were adopted unanimously.

Mr. John Kelly then stated that as the Resolutions he had offered, regarding the difficulties of New-York, and which were laid on the table, did not quite meet with the approbation of the New-York Delegation, and he therefore offered the following:

Whereas, This Convention does not claim nor assume the right to interfere with local political difficulties existing in the Democratic Party in the City of New York; yet, nevertheless it cannot shut its eyes to the evil results thereof, and its tendency to our disorganization throughout the State at the coming election, if persisted in by its various contending sects; therefore, we beg leave to recommend to them unity of action, as it will be sure to bring forth harmony and peace, and results favorable to our organization of the greatest paramount interest in the coming election.

Whereas, It appears to this Convention that although there are two distinct organizations of the Democratic Party in the City of New-York there is no material difference of principle, therefore,

Resolved, That we earnestly recommend the two General Committees recognized by this Convention to combine and consolidate in order that the Democracy of the City in the approaching contest may exhibit an unbroken front and undivided counsels.

Mr. Fairchild, of Madison, objected to the resolution. He was desirous of leaving the New-York quarrels to the people of New-York.

Mr. Kelly defended the resolution.

Mr. Kelly offered the following as a substitute:

Resolved, That this Convention most earnestly recommend to the several conflicting Democratic organizations in the City of New York, in view of the importance of the approaching election, to adjust their differences in the spirit of concession and harmony, so that the whole mass of the Democracy of the City shall be united in one organization.

Mr. Sickles advocated the resolution, saying that at this late hour, when the seats of the Convention were deserted, it was not proper to adopt any but very general resolutions.

Mr. Fairchild opposed any resolutions at all, saying they were inexpedient and improper at this time. We then moved the previous question but withdrew his motion for Mr. Kelly.

Mr. Kelly urged his own resolution on the ground that it recognized only two organizations.

Much confusion now prevailed, amidst which a motion for a vote of thanks to the President and Secretary was put and carried, when the Convention adjourned sine die.

The names added to the State Committee are Fowler and Jones, of the Second District, and Cagger and Brach of the Third District.

Meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee.

Syracuse, Friday Sept. 11.

The following call has been issued:

Syracuse House, Friday, Sept. 11.

The members of the Democratic State Central Committee will meet at Albany on Tuesday the 22d inst., for the purpose of organization.

DEAN RICHMOND, Chairman.

Peter Cagger, Secretary.

The Methodist Quarterly.—A recent editorial article in the Methodist Quarterly Review, by Dr. Wheedon, against Slavery, has created some sensation in the Methodist Church and some remark in the Methodist newspapers, for the reason that it takes the strongest anti-slavery position ever assumed in the editorial department of that Review. The Northern Independent hails the article as a most gratifying circumstance, and mentions the names of three of the editors—Wise, Floy and Wheedon—as "men whom no party drilling, or church saving, can corrupt into silent witnesses of wrong."

The Early Methodists.—City Road Chapel, in London, contains the monuments erected to the chief heroes of early Methodism. On the right of the chancel, beneath the Lord's prayer, are the tablets erected to the memory of Jno. Wesley, Adam Clarke, Thomas Coke and Richard Watson. On the left, beneath the ten commandments, are those of Chas Wesley, John Fletcher and Joseph Benson. In the centre of the graveyard, just back of the pulpit, reposes the dust of Rev. John Wesley. Just beside Mr. Wesley's grave is the vault and monument of Dr. Clarke.

Religious Affairs in Naples.—The King of Naples has made new and important concessions to the Roman Court. The authorization of the secular government for entering a monastic order will be no longer required, and bequests for religious purposes will be free from all restrictions. The latter decree is especially welcomed by the clergy. The moral and religious superintendence over the galley-slaves has been given over to the Order of Jesuits, who enjoy again the confidence of the King, although the periodical published by them in Rome is still forbidden in Naples.

Churches in Philadelphia.—In 1821, when the population of Philadelphia was 140,000, the whole number of church edifices was 64, as follows: Protestant Episcopal, 10; Methodist, 13; Presbyterian, 11; Baptist, 8; Roman Catholic, 4; all others, 18. With the present population of about 600,000, the number of church edifices is 260, not including many new ones in progress of erection, viz.: Protestant Episcopal, 31; Methodist, 48; Presbyterian, 44; Baptist, 31; Roman Catholic, 27; all others, 87.

Fagots for Heretics.—The Aldgate Church, in London, has a fund, bequeathed to it in the dark days of persecution. Its specific purpose was to purchase fagots, not to warm the cold, or prepare food for the hungry poor, but the basest purpose for which centuries are now past, and the supply so far exceeded the demand, that there is no more room for storing away the abundant fagots. The trustees of the fund, it is said, now give away the proceeds, to keep alive charity, and comfort and save the very alms land a different age had consigned to the flames.

MARKET REPORTS.
